A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day
Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)
Cows will clean better after freshening. Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems. Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening. Will help rumen function over freshing. Less foot problems and less stress.
This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
December 5, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids moved slightly higher on export optimism. Lack of overnight export sales pushed corn and soybean lower. Wheat steady to 1 cent higher. Corn 1 to 4 cents lower. Sorghum steady to 3 cents lower. Soybeans 1 to 2 cents lower. Recent trade talks that export interest may pickup this week for wheat was the major support factor. Indications are that Spain, Egypt or China could be seeking US wheat over the next day or so. Continued dry conditions in parts of the winter wheat growing areas also offered strength to bids. No export sales were announced today for corn or soybeans. Some good orders are on this week's books but more sales are needed before bids can strengthen.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

DECEMBER 10–16, 2001

FIRST DAY OF CHANUKAH, DEC. 10

SEEING THE LIGHT

December 13 marks the anniversaries of two women who were "bright lights" in their small communities. It is the feast day of St. Lucia, a patroness of blindness, who died in Italy in A.D. 304. Also called St. Lucy's Day, it is celebrated in Sweden, with young girls parading through the towns, wearing crowns of candles and delivering cakes and coffee to hospitals, homes, and businesses. December 13 also marks the day "Grandma Moses" died in 1961. Born in 1860, Anna Mary Robertson was a farmer's wife who did not begin to paint until she was in her 70s. She was over a hundred when she died, but by then her painted "primitives" of country scenes had become popular and were exhibited all over the world.

Lucy light, Lucy light, shortest day and longest night.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Candles kept in the freezer will burn longer.

OPINION

If Wishing Could Make It So

If I had a wish list for Santa this holiday season, it wouldn't necessarily contain such large-scale requests as an end to this persistent drought or the cease-fire of the Afghan War, though it would be nice.

I would make it simple. It would be for some other items that farmers would certainly like to see.

Thanks to the promises of genetic engineering, I can think of several things I wouldn't mind seeing developed by science and industry, handed over to Santa, and passed down the chimney for all of us to enjoy. Maybe the promises of biotech will pay off, perhaps handsomely, in years to come.

But these three things come to mind almost immediately:

• For a crop that is as tolerant as The Weed. By The Weed, I refer to the year 1999, one of the hottest and longest summers, and most certainly the driest summer in Pennsylvania on record. The Weed was a simple dandelion, growing out of an asphalt crack on Rt. 272 in Akron, despite months of little or no rain, very little sunshine, and no fertilizer. The Weed was as thriving as can be. Scientists have to find a way to translate this brash summer hardy yield-robbing crop's genetics into corn and soybeans. Farmers would, then, have little or nothing to worry about come a drought (or wet) year or other horrific growing conditions.

• The Butterball (no relationship to any trademarked poultry product). This is a term to mean a genetically "created" meat animal coined by futurist writer Mike Resnick. This high-protein, lowfat animal reproduces quickly, has an extraordinarily high feed conversion capability, has little or no waste product, and needs little water or air. All parts can easily be consumed or converted to use.

• Though this hasn't anything to do with biotech, I'm waiting for some Silicon Valley electronic engineer ace to create the "transcriber," a device that could take a voice recording and print out pages. It can recognize English, no matter what the accent, and provide printouts. As a journalist, the benefits of a device such as this voice-recognition/transcription technology would be enormous, and journalists would certainly purchase it.

Those things, Santa, would do us a whole wide world of good.

To Be Aware Of Grain Inventories

As you prepare to buy grain for your feeding needs or sell grain if you are a producer, it is important to understand grain inventories.

H. Louis Moore, professor of agricultural economics at Penn State, prepared the following update.

The Nov. 9 Crop Report revised the size of the U.S. corn crop up 1 percent from October to 9.55 billion bushels. While the crop size is down 4 percent from a year ago, it will be the sixth consecutive crop exceeding 9 billion bushels.

The first time the U.S. ever produced a crop greater than 9 billion bushels was in 1992. To follow up with so many crops exceeding 9 billion bushels is very unusual. If the final crop, after harvest, is 9.55 billion bushels, it will be the fourth largest crop on record and the second highest yield, averaging 138 bushels nationally.

Pennsylvania was severely hurt by drought again and the corn crop is expected to be 97.7 million bushels, down about 40 million bushels from last year. The Pennsylvania yield per acre is expected to be 94 bushels compared to 127 bushels a year ago.

Less corn was planted and harvested nationally in 2001 because corn prices have been depressed and the government program for soybeans has been much more attractive to producers. Producers harvested about 3.5 million fewer corn acres than a year ago.

Soybean acreage in 2001 increased nearly 2 million from a year ago, and the yield per acre at 39.4 bushels is up about 1.3 bushels from a year ago. This will yield a new all-time record soybean harvest at 2.92 billion bushels. The crop will be about 6 percent larger than the 2000 crop. In Pennsylvania, the soybean harvest will be about 15.7 million bushels, down 800,000 bushels from last year despite an increase of 40,000 acres harvested.

Before Sept. 11, the corn market was projected to be higher this fall and winter. This projection was based on a somewhat lower carryover of grain and an export market about as strong as a year ago. The domestic use of corn as livestock feed use was forecast to increase even more.

All bets are off since the Sept. 11 events. The beef market and dairy markets have seen lower prices and exports are really uncertain. It is almost certain, too, that we are in a recession. The only question unanswered is: how long will the recession last? At this point it is important to collect the maximum amount from the government program and to check the benefits of your crop insurance program.

The impact of the record harvest will keep soybean prices relatively low. Because of the ripple effects of the growing world recession, it will be difficult to increase exports and domestic use of soybeans.

To Monitor Groundwater Levels in Your Area

Groundwater levels naturally fluctuate over the course of a year, affecting the performance of your well. Groundwater levels tend to be highest during March and April following winter snow melt and spring rains.

During the growing season, groundwater recharge is very limited since trees and other plants use most of the available water to grow. Typically groundwater levels are at their lowest level for the year in September and October before being replenished by fall and winter rains. This year we have yet to see any significant fall recharge, so we are in a very serious water supply situation.

Bryan Swistock, extension associate in the forest resources department, advises that direct determination of the groundwater level in your well is difficult and usually requires the use of a water level meter. These meters are comprised of an electrical probe attached to the end of a measuring tape. The probe is lowered into the well until a display or light indicates that it has reached water. The depth to water is then read directly from the measuring tape. These instruments generally cost $300 or more depending on the anticipated length of tape needed.

Swistock also suggests there are other, less direct, but more practical methods to determine the status of your well water supply. In recent years, the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) has developed a Web-based system to access water levels from a group of monitoring wells in Pennsylvania.

The USGS measures 67 wells in nearly every county of the state. They have developed a Webpage that allows viewers to access water levels over the past two years from 40 of these wells. In addition to the actual water level, different shaded areas are provided to illustrate the normal conditions as well as drought watch, warning, and emergency water levels. This information, although not specific to your well, will allow you to observe the general trend in groundwater levels in your area. The Webpage for this system is http://pa.water.usgs.gov/durplots/well—duration.html.

Once you access this page, choose the well nearest to your house and select the "30-day graph" to view the up-to-date groundwater conditions in your area. The graphs are color coded to easily show when a particular well is experiencing drought conditions and the severity of the conditions. You can also view up-to-date groundwater levels and other information for all 67 monitoring wells, including the water levels over the past seven days, at the following USGS Website: http://water.usgs.gov/pa/nwis/current?type= gw.

You may also be able to learn more about your local groundwater conditions by contacting local well drillers and neighbors. Well drillers are continually drilling new wells and, therefore, may have knowledge of groundwater levels near your well. They may also have installed new submersible pumps in nearby wells that would allow them to document the existing groundwater level. Similar discussions with neighbors that have had new pumps installed or had new wells drilled may provide valuable information about the groundwater level.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

The Farm Bill that will be reported by the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee will contain some favorable provisions for all area dairy farmers.

Certainly, we would have favored a dairy bill that set milk prices based on the average cost of producing milk. However, the dairy provisions of the Farm Bill will allow higher prices to be paid to dairy farmers.

At the same time, the bill will stabilize prices paid to dairy farmers. Much of the credit for the dairy provisions in the Farm Bill should go to Sen. Pat Leahy from Vermont. A similar dairy provision introduced in the House by Rep. Bernie Sanders from Vermont lost by only 27 votes.

Some of the early opposition to the dairy provisions by some organizations tells me the bill must be very good.

The bill will help all dairy farmers.

The Farm Bill, if passed as it comes out of the committee, will establish a floor price for Class I milk (bottled milk). My understanding is that federal order #1,

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

PIE-IN-THE-SKY

Background Scripture:
Isaiah 11:1-9.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 12.

In today's paper was a startling photograph of a Claremore, Okla. man snuggling with Toshi, a full-grown white Bengal tiger, recovering from surgery for an serious aortic condition. We are told that one does not hug a well tiger, let alone a sick one, but the picture shows a rather cozy twosome.

I recalled a fascinating nonfiction book, "The Man Who Listens to Horses" by Monty Roberts (Random House). Raised to believe the conventional wisdom that, before you can train a horse, you must first break his spirit and dominate him, Monty Roberts has discovered that it is far preferable and more effective to "listen" to the horse through his or her body language. He has been so successful in dealing with "problem horses" that he frequently is called to England to work with the horses of Queen Elizabeth II.

The prejudice against which Monty Roberts has worked throughout most of his life is one that seems to permeate human minds when it comes to our relations with the world in which God has placed us. Too often we have attempted to assert our dominance over God's creation and creatures. God has called us to be good stewards of his creation, not dominate it. Similarly, many parents believe that the only way to raise their children is to break their wills and dominate them.

Peaceful Coexistence

Isaiah, however, tells of a future in which "the wolf shall live with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and calf and the lion and the fatling together . . ." (11:6). Through the symbolism of the peaceful coexistence of a variety of wild creatures, he foresees a day when former enemies will live in peace — Christians living peacefully with Moslems, Irish Catholics with Protestants, Israelis and Palestinians dwelling side by side or even Democrats and Republicans "burying the hatchet" and not in each other.

Isaiah looked for a Davidic descendant to reign over Israel and restore the nation. Some scholars believe he used these words when he anointed Hezekiah to be King of Israel. This "anointed one" would embody all the Davidic ideals. In fact, he expected what most of us look for in a leader: "And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord. And his delight shall be in the fear of the Lord."

Led By A Little Child

It is impossible for us to read this passage without identifying the one who shall come as Jesus Christ. As a matter of faith, we believe that he was the one who perfectly fulfilled this expectation.

When Isaiah says, "and a little child shall lead them," we cannot help but see the infant Jesus lying in a manger and in his helplessness defying the ways of the world that delay, but do not ultimately defeat God's plan and purpose for this world.

That is a vision of a future that lies far beyond us, but occasionally we catch a glimpse of what we and the world were created to become. God's peaceable kingdom may lie beyond our own immediate grasp, but it is in the very direction that he bids us to grow. We may not personally see the lion lie down with the lamb, but shall we not yearn and strive to incarnate the one who "shall not judge by what his eyes see, or decide by what his ears hear; but with righteousness he shall judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth." With the help of God, this ideal does not lie beyond the realm of human possibility. When we begin to embody and live the ideals of Christ, then "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

"Pie-in-the-sky?" No — not if we let the Messiah of God rule our hearts, homes, and nation.

which is the Northeast order, will command a floor price of $17.50 per CWT. The Class I price in December 2001 is $15.23 per CWT and would be lower in January 2002.

The bill calls for the Commodity Credit Corporation (C.C.C.) to make payments to producers when the price used for manufactured milk falls below $14.25 per CWT. The payment will be based on 25 percent of the difference between $14.25 per CWT and the lower price.

The premium money for Class I milk will be pooled nationally and all dairy farmers will benefit.

The national pooling of the Class I premium should gather support from the senators and representatives of the upper Midwest because their producers, with a very low Class I utilization, will realize as much as other dairy farmers. However, it appears that some representatives from the upper Midwest are opposing the dairy provisions. They are calling the provisions similar to the original Northeast Dairy Compact and point to a supposedly report from Penn State calling the compact a cartel to raise milk prices to consumers.

The only report from Penn State that I am aware of came from Ken Bailey, who came to Penn State from the University of Missouri. In my opinion, Bailey's report was somewhat misleading and gave ammunition that was used to undermine the Compact.

Isn't it strange that references continue to be made about Penn State, when both the Pennsylvania House and Senate passed legislation that would have allowed Pennsvlvania to join the Compact? The legislation was signed into law by former Gov. Tom Ridge. Maybe Penn State should evaluate the work of some of their people and determine if their work is helping or harming dairy farmers.

I strongly urge all dairy farmers and interested parties to contact their U.S. senators and representatives to pass the proposed dairy legislation.

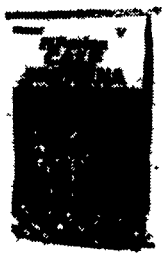
ATTRACTIVE GROWTH STOCK

The growth a calf achieves during her first six months will help determine her later income potential as a cow. That's why you need Purina® Calf Startena® and Calf Growena®.

Fortified Startena and Growena feeds have an ideal nutritional balance that can enhance your calves' skeletal and muscle growth while also developing their digestive systems. Those benefits can help your calves reach the recommended six-month growth goals of 400 pounds for heavy breeds and 265-345 pounds for light breeds.



With that kind of a good start from Startena and Growena, records show calves are more likely to breed and begin milking on schedule. That makes them great long-term investments for you. Talk to Purina for details, and watch your stock take off.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Nov. 30, 2001

Planning For Milk Prices In 2002

- December Class I mover drops.
- Outlook for 2002 milk prices.
- Hedging strategies.

USDA announced last week that the December 2001 Class I mover for fluid milk in all federal orders would decline $3.78 per CWT from the prior month to $11.98/CWT. The class I differential is added to this figure to determine the fluid price for milk in a given location (that is, it will be $15.23 per CWT in Boston, Mass. for December, 2001).

This severe drop will come as a big shock for many dairy producers in heavy fluid markets. In Pennsylvania, where 40 percent of all sales are for fluid purposes, this drop alone will take roughly $1.50/CWT out of the December milk check.

The reason for the December Class I price drop was falling cheese and butter prices. The lower butter price reduced the advanced butterfat pricing factor from $1.8556 in November to $1.4513 per pound in December. The lower cheese price reduced the advanced Class III skim milk pricing factor from $9.60 per CWT in November to $6.32 in December. As a result, the advanced Class IV skim price of $7.15 per CWT was used in the calculation of the December base skim milk price.

The technical explanation won't mask the disappointment and concern of dairy farmers seeing a nearly $4 per CWT drop in the Class I milk price. That said, producers who forward-contracted their milk or hedged through a broker could have avoided this rather steep price drop.

For many producers, hedging and forward contracting has a rather mixed history. Producers who locked in milk prices for the months January through September 2001 inevitably sat back and watched market prices climb well above their hedged position. For some, this was evidence enough that hedging was "risky business." However, the recent drop, steep as it is, shows just how risky relying on the market can be.

What is needed is a good conservative hedging strategy. This is no different than investing your retirement dollars. Let's start by reviewing the market outlook for 2002:

USDA projects the following:

- The milk supply will increase 2.7 percent.
- Consumption of dairy products will rise 2-3 percent.
- Farm-gate milk prices will drop about $1.90 per CWT.
- The U.S. economy will remain in a recession during most of 2002.
- Imports of Milk Protein Concentrate "may" increase if world powder prices continue to drop.
- USDA "may" further reduce the support price for nonfat dry milk, thus increasing producer exposure to lower Class I, II, and IV prices.

Now, let's review the futures market.

As of Nov. 29, 2001, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange Class III futures market offered an average contract price of $12.20 per CWT for the first half of 2002 and $12.85 for the second half of 2002. Two other facts: the Class III price averaged less than $12 over the past 5 years, and the outlook for 2002 milk prices are very uncertain at best.

So, what is a good hedging strategy? Well, if you think the milk supply will grow at a rate less than 2 percent next year, as the market likely thinks, than do nothing and "ride the market." However, if you believe the milk supply will grow in the 2-3 percent range, as USDA does, then hedging part of your 2002 milk supply now (say 10-25 percent) may be good advice.

Once you have 10-25 percent of your 2002 milk supply locked up, you can hold off and hedge another 20-25 percent over the course of the year when prices look particularly favorable. That's what some producers recently did when they hedged October December 2001 milk earlier in the year. This strategy represents a good balance between "locking it all in at a bad price" and doing nothing and "riding the market."

For more information about forward contracting and hedging, consider reading a new Penn State report, "The Fundamentals of Forward Contracting, Hedging, and Options For Dairy Producers In the Northeast." To order, call Penn State at (877) 345-0691 and ask for report number UA359.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
November 30, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Nov 30. Receipts: this week 155,950; last week 48,100; year ago 199,800. Compared to last week; feeder cattle sold 2.00-5.00 higher across the nation, with many instances as much as 8.00 higher. This advance goes on top of last week's similar trend on much lighter holiday receipts. Many areas are now selling feeder cattle as much as 15.00 higher than in mid-November. Demand was very good for both calves and yearlings, with the possible exception of six- weight calves that fall in an awkward position. They're too heavy to turn-out on wheat and too light to put in the feedyard, which has many buyers paying the same price per head for a thinner calf weighing under 500 lbs. A blast of cold air covered most of the country this past week, causing cowboys to pull out their long underwear and farmers find their insulated coveralls. Knee-high over-boots were also needed across the upper Midwest, where snowfall measurements were in the double digits. A nice blanket of snow also fell on parts of the High Plains, which is just exactly what the winter wheat needed. Many producers have been holding on to their calves and enjoying continued grass growth during this mild fall and others are putting-off marketing for weaning purposes. Premiums have finally opened eyes to the importance of preconditioning and the popularity of special Wean-Vac sales has increased the overall value of this year's spring calf crop. Sympathy will be minimal for those who don't take advantage of this price jump, because we are still in the midst of a volatile market. The Stock Market has started quietly flirting with 10,000 again and fats have gained 6.00 in the last two week's, but sensitive futures and dressed beef values remind us that we're still walking on thin ice. This week's reported volume included 33 percent over 600 lbs.

Oklahoma Feeder Cattle Weekly

Oklahoma City, OK
December 5, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary — Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves steady. Demand good for steer calves, moderate for feeder cattle and heifer calves. Quality average. Feeder cattle in medium to fleshy conditions with several grain feds included. Calves mostly weaned and in thin to medium flesh with gaunt weigh-ups. Calf conditions continue to improve with more calves in some stage of weaned. Weigh-ups of feeder cattle average to full. Last weeks brief snow storm failed to put a damper on this season's wheat. Very mild temperatures thru fall have kept ground temps warm and the snow provided much needed moisture for further growth. Outlook continues mild for the next 7 days. Western Oklahoma wheat has missed most of this season's moisture and much of the area has failed to make. Receipts this week 12,717; last week 9208; last year 14,652.

Supply consisted of 41% yearlings & calves over 600 lbs; 52% calves under 600 lbs; 7% cows & bulls. Heifers comprised 43% of feeder & calf supply. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

ADVISORY TEAMS: A SUCCESSFUL APPROACH TO MANAGEMENT

Looking at almost every type of farm operation in the agriculture industry, you will find there is greater technology, newer production tools, increased regulations, increased livestock numbers, and increased attention to profitability today, which the farm manager must focus on managing.

This all equates to the importance of wise decision-making. Now, more than ever, decision-making can be a challenging and complex responsibility.

Utilizing the skills and advice that off-farm experts can lend may provide the knowledge base you need to keep your farm viable and competitive in today's market.

One way to aid in this process is to form an advisory team for your farm. This can be a rather simple or complex project depending on the scope of knowledge you are seeking and the depth in which you wish to evaluate.

Penn State University's Dairy Advisory Teams program is just completing a five-year project, which will come to a close at the end of 2001. Although its focus was primarily on the dairy industry in Pennsylvania, much of its research and findings on this concept could be utilized on a broader sense with other types of farm operations. To define what an advisory team can accomplish, let's take a look at Penn State's findings.

First, an advisory team can compile the farm's challenges that need the greatest attention. The second benefit is your team can review these challenges and new ideas can be generated to address them. The team can then formulate goals and action plans to seek greater profitability. Each of these steps will lend itself to the team members in forming a new optimistic vision for the farm operation.

There are some key steps to consider when forming your advisory team. You will want to choose members of your team that have a working knowledge of your farm and whose advice you respect and value. Consider those areas of your farm that have the greatest challenges and select those whose expertise could provide solutions for these challenges.

Having a broad base of knowledge represented on your team is important. Team members may include your lender, veterinarian, nutritionist, accountant, extension agent, or another farmer. Depending on the size of your farm, three to six people are usually the recommended number for your advisory team. You will need to determine how often the team will meet, and then compile a meeting schedule.

Before the first meeting, the farmer needs to complete his/her own review of the farm. Consider the current strengths and weaknesses, long-term goals, and overall purpose you hope the advisory team will play. At your first meeting, it is important for the farmer to share with the team his or her own assessment. It needs to be made clear that the owner of the farm has the final decision on all items, but values everyone's input and opinions.

Penn State suggests completing a "S.W.O.T." analysis as a team to inform everyone about the farm. The S.W.O.T. process stands for Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats of the farm. Once this review is completed, the advisory team is ready to establish the team's goals for the farm.

A great concept in goal setting that Penn State promotes is "S.M.A.R.T." goal-setting. The acronym represents a series of steps to review when establishing goals. They ask if the goal is Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant, and Timely. Specific goals would be very detailed and focused on one key area of the farm. A goal is measurable if you can quantify the outcome either by numbers or a verifiable answer. Achievable goals are ones that can be reached, either short or long term, not an impossible to reach goal. A relevant goal is one that reaches an outcome that has great purpose to the farm. Timely goals are important to set to ensure completion. When the advisory team completes the establishment of the overall goals, it's time for the group to go to work in helping the farm to achieve them.

The concept of using an advisory team for any business is an excellent plan of management. You not only gain the diverse knowledge of many experts in the field, but will help develop solutions for your farm's challenges while planning for a stronger future.

Although the Penn State Advisory Team is ending this month, project leader Lisa Holden, associate professor, dairy and animal science, will be working with industry and extension agents who are interested in training others about this concept. She can be reached at (814) 863-3672 or at lholden@psu.edu.

Penn State University also has a CD-ROM available that includes all the program material during the past five years developed for advisory teams. They are also in the process of reconstructing the Dairy Advisory Team Website http://dat.das.psu.edu, which will serve as an excellent resource.

The 2002 Farm Business Management School will be conducted Feb. 5, 2002. The upcoming workshops will feature "The Farm Executive for the 21st Century" with Dr. Danny Klinefelter, professor and extension economist at Texas A&M University.

Quality Corn Silage Workshop

UNIONTOWN (Fayette Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension and local agribusinesses are sponsoring two workshops in western Pennsylvania designed to assist dairy producers and other livestock farmers to grow, harvest, and feed quality corn silage.

The programs are scheduled for the Days Inn, Meadeville, Dec. 17 and Mt. View Inn, Greensburg, Dec. 18. Dr. William Weiss, an Ohio State University animal scientist, will be the featured presenter and will be addressing the importance of high quality silage in the ruminant diet and also discussing issues relating to the harvesting and storage of silage.

Dr. Greg Roth, extension corn specialist, Penn State, will discuss new thoughts on silage production with an emphasis on hybrid selection.

Agribusiness representatives will offer some comments relative to new products and services available for 2002.

The program begins at 9:15 a.m. each day. Registration fee is $15, which includes lunch and morning refreshments. Persons interested in participating should contact their local Pennsylvania cooperative extension office or Don Fretts, Penn State Cooperative Extension, 61 E. Main, Uniontown, PA 15401, (724) 438-0111 or e-mail: dcf3@psu.edu.

Registration is due by Dec. 13.

Farmer-To-Farmer Workshops Set

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Regional Farm and Food Project has announced a series of "farmer to farmer" workshops to be conducted in January and February near Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

• Jan. 11-13: "Sustainable Greenhouse Design & Production: Season Extension & Winter Growing for Vegetable and Flower Farmers" will be led by well-known organic market gardener and winter growing guru Eliot Coleman of Maine (author of Four Season Harvest and The New Organic Grower); Ed Person, New Hampshire farmer and maker of the famous Ledgewood Greenhouses; and Steve Moore, Pennsylvania organic farmer and energy-efficient solar greenhouse maven.

Energy-efficient off-season greenhouse production is often a viable alternative to expanding field acreage and can give access to wide-open markets for locally grown produce in the colder months.

Fee for this workshop is on a sliding scale from $120 to $200. There will be a $10 late fee for registration after Dec. 28.

• Feb. 1: "Increase Your Profit: Financial Management for Established Farmers" will be led by Richard Wiswall, a Vermont organic vegetable farmer known for his ability to address this often difficult subject in an interesting, effective way. Topics include goal-setting, enterprise budgeting (a method for comparing the costs and returns involved with producing different crops,) planning for retirement, managing crews, and efficient and accurate billing and paper management.

Sliding scale fee is $30 to $50, with a $10 late fee for registration after Jan. 18.

• Feb. 2 and 3: "Creating Healthy Soils and Overcoming Weeds: Biological Principles for Agriculture" will be led by accomplished organic farm couples, Anne and Eric Nordell and Klaas and Mary-Howell Martens; Cornell University weed ecologist Chuck Mohler; and Michigan biological agricultural consultant Joe Scrimger; with discussions moderated by life-long farmer Linda Hildebrand.

The workshop will take a deep, practical view of soil quality as the basis for sound agricultural production. Topics will include strategies for growing healthy crops economically while enhancing the life of your soil and its nutrient-holding capacity and reducing weed pressure. This workshop will be useful to vegetable farmers, market gardeners, field crop growers, and dairy farmers.

Sliding scale fee is $100 to $150, with $10 late fee for registration after Jan. 19.

All three workshops will be conducted in Ballston Spa, near Saratoga Springs. Sliding scale fees include catered meals.

Futurity Entries Accepted

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 2004 Keystone Holstein 3-year-old Futurity entries are being accepted.

The Keystone Holstein Futurity is a project of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association to stimulate interest in breeding and developing outstanding registered Holsteins for production and type regardless of individual herd size.

Three nominations are required for each animal that competes. The first payment for the 2004 Futurity is due Dec. 15, 2001. Any breeder may nominate as many heifer calves as they wish. There is a guaranteed purse of $500 to the winner.

Rules and Conditions

• Eligibility: Any Registered Holstein female of 87 percent parentage or higher bred and born in Pennsylvania between Sept. 1, 2000 and Aug. 31, 2001 is eligible for the Keystone Holstein Futurity.

• Fees: First payment of $3 per head with nomination paid by Dec. 15, 2001, second payment of $11 per head paid by Sept. 15, 2002, and third payment of $20 per head paid by Sept. 15, 2003.

• Purse: All Futurity monies shall be used only for Futurity purposes. The purse in this event will be divided with 50 percent or at least $500 being awarded to the first-place animal. The remainder will be divided among those competitors who show in the 2004 Futurity Class.

• Refunds: All nomination fees are committed to the purse. No refunds will be made whether an animal competes or eligibility is discontinued.

• Maintaining Eligibility: Eligibility after an animal has been nominated is maintained by making subsequent payment by due dates as specified. Any animal sold after being nominated will remain eligible, as long as the animal meets all other Pennsylvania Holstein Show eligibility requirements. The owner will be notified when payments are due. Failure to make the next payment cancels eligibility.

Pa. State Grange Requests New Overorder Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange testified recently for a $1.40 overorder premium before the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

The overorder premium would actually be $1.65 due to a temporary 25-cent premium that was previously added because of escalating fuel costs.

The rise in fuel costs has adversely affected nearly every aspect of farming - from an increase in feed and fertilizer prices that are passed on to the farmer to additional charges for hauling their product to the market. The current overorder premium is set to expire Dec. 31, 2001.

C. Arthur Zug, a Juniata County dairy farmer and member of the Pennsylvania State Grange who testified on behalf of the Grange, believes that projections for dairy supplies are tight. According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, October milk production in Pennsylvania is down 1.5 percent from last year's production. Also, the total number of milk cows in Pennsylvania has decreased by 22,000 in the last 12 months.

Additionally, production costs for dairy farmers have not decreased in recent months. Some areas of the commonwealth, however, have had a dry season. The end result is a corn production decrease of 26 percent below last year and an alfalfa hay crop decrease of 13 percent over last year. Consequently, costs have either remained constant or have increased.

At the hearing, Zug stated, "For the first time in many years, we could tell the Pennsylvania dairy farmer that there is hope. They will be able to receive a fair and equitable return for their product."

Zug concluded by stating, "We are hopeful that the PMMB will assist the entire dairy industry since your actions affect all dairy producers, not only those under your direct jurisdiction."

Sleper Named Eastern Region Fluid Milk Supply Director

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Land O'Lakes, Inc. announced the selection of Jim Sleper as eastern region director in the fluid milk supply division of Land O'Lakes.

Sleper will report to Don Berg, vice president of the fluid milk supply division, and focus on providing strategic leadership for the future of the Land O'Lakes milk procurement and marketing systems in the eastern and southern U.S.

"We are very pleased that Jim has joined the Land O'Lakes team," Berg said. "He will bring valuable leadership and support to Land O'Lakes procurement and marketing strategies on behalf of the ever-changing needs of our dairy producers and fluid milk customers."

Sleper brings many years of valuable experience in the dairy industry from his work as a procurement director with Dean Foods, Inc., a dairy economist for Milk Marketing, Inc. (MMI) and his work with the Eastern Ohio-Western Pennsylvania Milk Market Administrator's office (Federal order #36).

Land O'Lakes To Adjust Product Mix, Focus Of Minnesota Processing Plants

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — In a continuing effort to maximize the efficiency of its upper Midwest dairy operations, Land O'Lakes announced plans to adjust the product mix at its Perham, Minn., processing plant and its Melrose, Minn., joint venture facility.

"Attaining optimal operating efficiency is vital to success in today's highly competitive dairy foods marketplace," said Fernando Palacios, Land O'Lakes Dairy Foods Operations and supply chain vice president. "From a processing point of view, that means developing intensely focused plant operations. With that in mind, our Perham, Minn., plant will intensify its focus on high potential, high value whey proteins, and the joint venture facility in Melrose will focus on cheese production."

Palacios indicated the changes would be implemented in early February.

"The adjustment in production at the two plants will enable Land O'Lakes to better meet its cooperative goals of developing and preserving markets for member milk, adding maximum value to that milk and generating positive returns for members," Palacios said.

Palacios added that changes will have no adverse financial impact on producers supplying the Melrose and Perham plants, and that there will be no change in producer programs.

Preliminary Data Links Crohn's Disease To Johne's Disease Found In Sheep

WOOSTER, Ohio — An animal disease that has potential links to a human intestinal illness may be more closely tied to sheep rather than dairy cattle, where the disease is most commonly associated.

Ohio State University veterinary researcher Srinand Sreevatsan said preliminary research results show that the organism that causes Johne's disease (pronounced yo-nees) in sheep may be related to the organism that causes Crohn's disease in humans. If true, it would finally answer the question of which animal host is linked to the human disease and how humans may be coming into contact with the organism that has been associated with it.

"It would mean that the disease is possibly coming from sheep," said Sreevatsan. "But right now the results don't logically explain how the organism is traveling from sheep to humans." He said that it might take as long as six months to a year to determine whether or not the preliminary data holds up.

Johne's disease, also known as paratuberculosis, is a highly contagious bacterial illness that affects dairy and beef cattle, but it has also been found in sheep, goats and a variety of wild animals. The disease, which can be fatal, causes chronic diarrhea, rapid weight loss and emaciation.

Researchers theorize the disease is connected to Crohn's disease, also known as inflammatory bowel disease, a chronic disorder that causes inflammation or ulceration in the small and large intestines. Research reports that 30 percent to 75 percent of patients with Crohn's disease test positive for the bacterium that also causes Johne's disease.

Debate has raged for years over how humans are coming into contact with the organism - whether by consuming milk, dairy or meat products, or through the environment as an animal sheds the organism. The dairy industry has been at the center of attention as some research has shown that pasteurization does not destroy the bacterium.

Johne's disease is most prevalent in dairy cattle. The dairy industry loses approximately $200-$250 million annually, and each case of Johne's disease costs the farmer about $245 per infected cow a year. About 45 percent of U.S. dairy herds are currently infected with paratuberculosis.

Sreevatsan's research involves studying the organism at the molecular level using DNA fingerprinting and sequencing to determine if an animal bacterium closely resembles the human bacterium. So far he has collected over 1,000 cattle isolates, 10 to 15 goat isolates, seven human isolates and less than 10 sheep isolates, but only a small portion of the isolates have been analyzed so far.

"Each isolate is different for each animal species, but the diversity of the organism appears to be very limited," said Sreevatsan. "Its genome seems monomorphic. So it'll be a challenge to determine if isolates are different state to state, if there is limited sharing of the organism between animal populations or if there is a close association in geographical locality of their origin. Such answers could define ancestry and natural history of the disease, and cue us in to why certain clones are more prevalent than others."

Sreevatsan said that once that information is determined, the next step would be to identify and select virulence attributes of successful bacterial clones, develop vaccines and initiate management practices to help control the disease in the animal population. Such biomedical and management interventions would likely aid in eliminating the animal and human problems associated with the organism. But such work, said Sreevatsan, would take at least four to five years to complete.

"The disease is very difficult to work with as there is no good experimental animal model to use and signs of the disease take a long time to emerge," he said, adding that a cow may become exposed to the disease as a calf, but won't show symptoms until its first or second lactation. "We have to understand the epidemiology of the disease first to devise preventive measures in domestic and wild animal populations and determine if and how it affects humans."

DEP Accepting 'Growing Greener' Grant Applications

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess recently announced that the department now is accepting applications for watershed restoration and protection grants for the fourth year of the "Growing Greener" program.

"This is the fourth year of this historic investment in Pennsylvania's environment, and I've had the opportunity to see first hand the incredible accomplishments and enthusiasm for watershed stewardship that has grown from this program," Secretary Hess said.

"The investment of 'Growing Greener' in watershed restoration has improved our environment dramatically, in some cases restoring fish to streams that have been lifeless for 100 years."

The grants can be used to fund a variety of watershed projects, including organizing a watershed group; watershed assessments; development of watershed restoration and protection plans; implementation of watershed restoration or protection projects; demonstrations; education and outreach programs; reclaiming abandoned mines and oil and gas wells; and addressing acid-mine drainage polluted streams. The deadline for applications is Feb. 8, 2002.

"Growing Greener" already has funded projects to create or restore 4,261 acres of wetlands; complete 188 miles of stream buffer restoration; build 171 miles of stream improvement structures; reclaim 4,402 acres of abandoned mine lands; restore 370.5 miles of streams from acid mine drainage; and plug 1,242 oil and gas wells.

"Pennsylvania's new environmental heroes are the individuals, business people, farmers and local governments officials who are working hard to restore their watersheds," Secretary Hess said.

"While 'Growing Greener' has provided $86 million in watershed grants, local partners have added another $127 million from their own sources going above and beyond matching the state's funding."

In August, DEP won a Council of State Governments 2001 Innovations Award for watershed protection and restoration initiatives through the "Growing Greener" program. The Innovations Awards are presented annually to the most innovative new programs in state government.

"Growing Greener," signed into law in December 1999, marks the state's largest environmental investment ever — $650 million over five years.

To request an application, apply for a grant online, or for more information on "Growing Greener," visit DEP through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or www.GrowingGreener.org .

DEP Secretary Joins West Snyder High

BEAVER SPRINGS (Snyder County) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess recently joined students from West Snyder High School on Mitchell Run in Snyder County to monitor water quality as part of an effort to protect and restore the Middle Creek Watershed.

"These students are great examples of how both the environment and agriculture can thrive in Pennsylvania," Secretary Hess said. "The installation of best management practices on Mitchell Run will not only improve drinking water for livestock, but enhance trout and wood duck habitat throughout the watershed."

The West Snyder FFA chapter received a $21,289 grant through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency 319 program under Pennsylvania's "Growing Greener" initiative to complete the two-phase project involving three small streams Beaver Creek, Markley Run and Mitchell Run — within the Middle Creek Watershed.

The first phase will assess the water quality in the streams for a six- month period to establish a baseline.

Phase two will fence out livestock and provide out-of-stream drinking facilities, single log dams for enhanced trout and wood duck habitat, and streambank bio-stabilization.

Two of the three sites adjoin the West Snyder campus providing an educational setting for students to be involved. Several students from West Snyder High School are members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter.

The Mitchell Run Site is on the land of the Beaver Community Fair Association. Work done at this site includes: bio-stabilization of the creek banks, installation of single log dams to enhance existing trout habitat, and stocking the stream with trout for a youth fishing derby.

The Beaver Community Fair Association has partnered with the school in its environmental projects. The Fair Association will use the project as an example of good stewardship in a high visibility area with the annual fishing derby to showcase the stream improvements and trout habitat enhancement.

"Several of the students working at this site also have worked on other watershed protection projects," said Steve Kline, West Snyder FFA Chapter Advisor and agriculture teacher.

"We also received a grant from the Department of Education to do streambank repair, which many of the kids helped complete."

"Growing Greener" was established by the Ridge-Schweiker Administration in December 1999, marking the largest single investment ever made to clean up Pennsylvania's environment — $650 million over five years.

For more information on "Growing Greener," to request an application or to apply for a grant online, visit DEP through the PA Power Port at www.state.pa.us or www.GrowingGreener.org.

Economic Profile Of Horticulture, Nursery

COLUMBIA, Md. — According to the Maryland Nursery and Landscape Association, the horticulture, nursery and turfgrass industry is the second largest commodity group in Maryland with 16 percent of the state's total cash agriculture sales.

Only poultry production at 39 percent ranks higher.

The North Central Maryland counties, including Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Montgomery, and Prince George's, have experienced a phenomenal growth in the industry, closely paralleling the population growth in these counties.

In order to assess the current status of the horticulture, nursery and turfgrass industry in Howard County and to better support its future growth, the Agricultural Marketing Program of the Howard County Economic Development Authority conducted an industry survey in early 2001. The survey sought to determine:

- The economic impact of the horticulture, nursery, and turfgrass industry in Howard County.
- Whether the horticulture, nursery, and turfgrass industry qualifies as a target agriculture industry for development and support in Howard County.
- The trends, programs, and regulatory changes that may be needed to support the industry's growth in Howard County.

The results of this survey have been compiled into an "Economic Profile of the Horticulture, Nursery, and Turfgrass Industry in Howard County, Maryland."

Veneman Applauds Efforts On TPA

About 100 Groups Sign Letter of Support to Congress

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman today applauded efforts by the food and agriculture community to pass Trade Promotion Authority (TPA).

"Removing barriers around the world is fundamental to keeping our farmers, ranchers, and food sector on the path of prosperity and long-term economic growth," Veneman said. "Food and agriculture organizations and the thousands of members they represent know better than anyone that TPA is essential in ensuring that U.S. agriculture is effective at the negotiating table during new trade talks."

The Agricultural Coalition for Trade Promotion, a group of 95 agriculture and food groups, sent a letter to Congress outlining support for TPA and the importance of the Doha Declaration for food and agriculture. The group noted that foreign markets are critical because farmers and agribusiness depend on foreign consumers to purchase a large portion of their output.

According to USDA sources, TPA gives U.S. trade negotiators the ability to enter into trade agreements that will benefit the U.S. food and agricultural sector. Without TPA, other countries are less willing to negotiate seriously with the U.S. if they believe that agreements may be changed later. TPA will give the President the flexibility to take advantage of market-opening opportunities, while maintaining the closest possible consultation and collaboration with Congress.

"If we are to be most effective in fighting for our farmers and tearing down the walls that hinder the export of our products, Congress needs to give this Administration the tools to get the job done," said Veneman. "Export subsidies, particularly in the European Union, leave our farmers at a disadvantage and this Administration continues to show its strong commitment to leveling the playing field."

Last year, U.S. agricultural exports were valued at $51 billion. This year, sales are expected to reach $54.5 billion, producing a trade surplus of $14.5 billion. Dollar for dollar, the United States exports more meat than steel, more corn than cosmetics, more wheat than coal, more bakery products than motorboats, and more fruits and vegetables than household appliances.

U.S. farmers export approximately half the wheat they grow, more than 40 percent of all the cotton, and approximately one in every three rows of soybeans. Agriculture generally ranks among the top six U.S. industry groups in export sales, accounting for about five percent of the nation's total exports.

Pennsylvania Farm Show

Last year at Farm Show, about 1,000 poultry entries, including large fowl, Bantams, ducks, and geese were exhibited at the show. Many more birds could have been shown had the proper health papers been presented on entry day.

The issue is the lingering presence of avian influenza (A.I.) that remains in the New York and New Jersey live bird markets and the potential communication with poultry here in Pennsylvania.

To prevent this, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has implemented an important rule to protect your birds and the states' commercial industry. The rule states that all poultry to be shown must originate from one of the following flocks:

- A flock owned by the exhibitor and currently enrolled in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's A.I. Monitored Flock Program, or
- A flock from which 20 A.I. test negative blood samples were obtained Dec. 5 through Dec. 25, 2001.

A copy of the avian influenza test results must accompany all live poultry entering the Farm Show Complex.

The challenge for many exhibitors is getting their birds bled to verify A.I.-negative status during December. To this end, Dr. David Henzler at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has been training and certifying poultry technicians who can take the blood samples necessary for these tests.

Dr. Henzler and Mary Bates at the Department of Agriculture have a list of certified technicians who are willing to bleed birds in your area. Please contact them at (717) 783-6792. While there are other requirements to complete the Poultry Health Certificate and enter your birds at the 2002 Farm Show, don't let A.I. testing prevent you from winning grand champion.

Response Urged To EPA Drift Proposal

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) seeks comments until Jan. 19 on proposed pesticide product labeling designed to reduce spray drift. A specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences urges crop producers and others to respond.

"Pesticide manufacturers will be expected to print new drift reduction restrictions on most product labels," said Bill Hoffman, senior extension associate in Penn State's Pest Management Information Center. "Crop producers could be affected by new restrictions on ground boom and air-blast sprayer applications."

The proposed labeling targets key application criteria to reduce windblown spray droplets and particles, as opposed to off-target movement caused by chemical volatility, he said.

Hoffman described the proposed restrictions as follows:

• Ground Boom Sprayers. Nozzle height must be set to within 48 inches of the ground, or the top of the crop canopy. All applications in winds over 10 miles per hour (mph) will be prohibited. Pesticide manufacturers also will have the option to mandate the spray droplet size according to American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) standards.

• Air-Blast Sprayers. Applicators will be prohibited from directing sprays above trees or vines in orchards and vineyards. They would be required to turn off outward pointing nozzles at row ends and outer rows. Applications will be prohibited when wind speeds are less than three mph and greater than 10 mph.

• Other Drift Control Methods. The applicator must "use all other measures necessary to control drift" when using ground boom and air-blast sprayers. Measures recommended by Penn State Cooperative Extension include proper nozzle selection, decreasing spray pressure and using drift control agents.

• Wind Speed Measurement. Compliance with wind speed restrictions will be "as measured by an anemometer (a device that detects wind speed) at the application site." Extension experts long have recommended wind speed measurement as an important best management practice to control spray drift.

• "No-Spray" Zones. To protect humans, plants, animals, or natural resources from the adverse effects of spray drift, "no-spray zones" may be needed for certain products.

A no-spray zone is "an area in which direct application of the pesticide is prohibited. This area is specified as the distance between the closest point of direct pesticide application and the nearest boundary of a site to be protected, unless otherwise specified on a product label."

An example might be "Do not apply this product within 100 feet of ponds or streams where fish are present. Under no circumstances apply product within 100 feet of people or these areas."

The proposal is available on the Web at http://www.epa.gov/opppmsd1/PR_Notices/prdraft-spraydrift801.htm or by "fax-on-demand" at (202) 401-0527 (select item 6142).

Comments must be received by Jan. 19 and identified by the docket control number OPP-00730 on the first page of a mail submission, or in the subject line of an e-mail, according to Hoffman.

"State your views as clearly as possible, describe any assumptions you use, provide specific examples to illustrate your concerns, and describe alternatives," he said.

E-mail comments to opp-docket@epa.gov, or mail them to PRIB Information Resources & Services Division; Office of Pesticide Programs — EPA; 1200 Pennsylvania Ave., NW; Washington, D.C. 20460.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

PROPER USE OF VACCINES IS ESSENTIAL

Dr. Arlen Mills
Capitol Region
Extension Veterinarian

Vaccination is an essential part of any infectious disease control program for dairy farms. But to be successful, it must be planned to meet the needs of each operation.

Remember, we hope vaccines increase the animal's resistance to disease, and they should, but that resistance can be overwhelmed if good management practices are not followed.

A question which comes up with several of the viral infections is whether to use a killed vaccine or a modified live type of vaccine. This continues to be debated, but the consensus is that, especially for the first immunization a young calf receives, modified live vaccines give superior protection.

Setting up a vaccination program means determining which diseases to vaccinate against, which animals to vaccinate, and the time the animal most needs the protection to be provided. In light of this, a basic vaccination program that I recommend will be presented. Remember that this may need to be discussed with your veterinarian to determine what is best for your farm situation.

On most farms, calves can receive their first immunizations at four to six months of age. This is where the use of a modified live vaccine is recommended containing BVD, IBR, PI3, BRSV, and lepto. I want to see this repeated in four to six weeks to get those calves which did not respond to the vaccine initially and to ensure good BRSV protection.

On some farms with respiratory problems in the younger-age calves, I have vaccinated earlier, using this same vaccine or with just a modified live BRSV. Early vaccinated calves get a booster at six months of age.

On some farms I like to see calves vaccinated with a Clostridial bacterin as well at the four- to six-month age. I am recommending this more often now as we seem to be seeing more of the Clostridial enteritis in dairy herds. This might give us some protection and the cost is minimal.

The next vaccinations are due as prebreeding boosters. At this time I like to see the modified live vaccine containing BVD, IBR, PI3, BRSV, and lepto repeated. In herds which have had a Salmonella problem, I like to start heifers on a core antigen type bacterin at this time as well.

The next stop is the dry cows and prefresh heifers. In herds with viral disease problems, I may give a killed viral booster vaccine at this time. This would include BVD, IBR, PI3, BRSV, and lepto again. I use killed at this time as I should have good immunity from the modified live vaccine given earlier and the killed vaccines are labeled for use in bred animals.

The dry cows and prefresh heifers may also get a J5 bacterin-toxoid to prevent coliform mastitis. The number of doses will depend on the vaccine used.

Dr. Arlen Mills

Some like to give a vaccine for calf scours at this time as well. My belief is that the J5 bacterin will give some E coli protection to the calf through the colostrum.

I am not a big fan of the Rota and Corona scour vaccines, but if you like to use it, this is the time for that as well.

Do not vaccinate within a week of freshening, or the week after freshening either. During this critical time, the cow's immune system is depressed to the point of not being able to respond to a vaccine.

I see a lot of variation in the vaccination of the lactating cows. If the young stock vaccination program is being done properly, then I find that the type of vaccine used in the adult cows isn't as critical.

Some producers are using a modified live vaccine as a booster for all fresh cows prebreeding. Just remember that the label cautions use around bred animals. Others are using killed products in the lactating cows successfully. Discuss the pros and cons of each with your veterinarian.

In the last several years, I have seen more and more respiratory problems in adult cows. Switching these herds to a vaccine that had a live BRSV fraction in the lactating cow booster seemed to be helpful. These herds had not been using a modified live vaccine in the young stock, which I'm sure is part of the problem.

A successful vaccination program takes careful planning. The successful vaccination program must be scientifically correct and supported by good management practices.

Black Fungus Poses Threat To Home Gardeners

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Growing your own plants from seeds and cuttings can be fun and economical. But doing it "on the cheap" could cause a serious health problem, warns a specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"A dangerous fungus call Stachybotrys chartarum can colonize paper containers if they stay wet for an extended period," said Gretchen Kuldau, assistant professor of plant pathology.

Stachybotrys (pronounced stack-ee-bot-tris) can produce serious toxins that are absorbed in the lungs when the fungal spores are inhaled. Skin contact with the fungus can cause a painful dermatitis.

"While the paper in milk cartons and similar containers is treated to repel water," Kuldau says, "egg cartons and cardboard boxes generally are not. Once you fill them with soil, the paper becomes wet.

"Look for a heavy black patch of mold on the surface of paper or wood," Kuldau says. "The patch often looks sooty and may have white margins. Wet areas may be a little shiny or slimy."

Any wet cellulose-containing product is a candidate for invasion, including:

- Cardboard boxes that get wet and remain moist during storage
- Newspapers used to shade flats of young plants
- Newspapers stacked in moist places until thrown out
- Wood or drywall that's wet from condensation or continuous contact with wet soil
- Walls of flooded buildings.

"You don't want to have continued contact with this fungus," she said. "Breathing the spores can cause a burning sensation in your nose and throat, a bloody nose, eye irritation, tightness in the chest, cough, fever, headache and fatigue. We don't know how many spores need to be inhaled for symptoms to occur."

Immune-compromised individuals (persons with HIV/AIDS, those undergoing chemotherapy treatment and pregnant women) as well as the young and the elderly likely will be more susceptible to the fungus.

If you find black mold on wood or paper products, Kuldau suggests the following:

- Keep the material moist to hold spores in place. "If you let the material dry, the spores become airborne," she said. "If the material is already dry, wear a respirator to avoid breathing the spores. A dust mask is not sufficient protection."
- While wearing gloves and protective clothing, place the wet materials in a plastic bag or other container that can be closed, then dispose of them.

"You might be able to treat problem areas to reduce the amount of fungus present," she said. "Mix a household bleach solution (¼ cup of bleach per gallon of water), then spray it on contaminated surfaces using a hand-pumped garden sprayer. Thoroughly wet the surface, but avoid excessive runoff. Let the treated surface dry for six to eight hours."

If the fungus appears to grow back, Kuldau suggests trying a strong solution (1½ cups of bleach per gallon of water).

"When using bleach, be sure to wear eye protection and rubber gloves and ventilate the area well," she said. "And never mix bleach with ammonia — it creates toxic fumes."

To avoid growing Stachybotrys:

- Keep paper and wood products dry, off the ground and away from direct contact with moist soil.
- If you buy plants in recycled paper pots, watch for black patches of fungal growth on the pot surfaces. Dispose of pots with black fungus promptly, as described above.
- Don't grow plants in paper containers unless the paper has been treated to repel water. Even then, raise them off the soil on inverted plastic flats, or place them on benches or tables so the surfaces of the pots can dry.

For more information on molds in the home or other buildings, Kuldau suggests the Minnesota Department of Health's Webpage, "Mold in Homes" at http://www.health.state.mm.us/divs/eh/aialr/iair/moldsf.html, or the California Department of Health Services' "Mold in My Home: What Do I Do?" at http://www.cal-iaq.org/mold9803.htm.

Making Money In New Millennium Is Fruit And Vegetable Convention Theme

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Agricultural sustainability depends on the farmer's ability to make a profit. To do so, fruit and vegetable growers need the latest information on growing techniques, pest control, nutrition, marketing, and business management.

There is no better place for growers in the Mid-Atlantic region to learn how to make money in the new millennium than at the 2002 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center Jan. 29-31.

About 2,000 people, mostly fruit and vegetable growers, from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and other states are expected to gather.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with over 130 exhibitors. Specialized horticultural equipment, farm market merchandise, and packaging, will all be on display along with information on the latest seed varieties, fruit varieties, pesticides, and other supplies and services for the commercial grower.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention.

The following sessions are planned for the morning of the first day: tree fruits, marketing, season extension technology, basic vegetable production, cole crops, snap beans, peppers, and wine grapes. In the afternoon, sessions on tree fruits, wholesale marketing, greenhouse vegetables, sweet corn, organic production, potatoes, and wine grapes will be offered.

On the second day, full-day sessions will include information on peaches, tree fruits, direct marketing, greenhouse ornamentals (bedding plants and perennials), and potatoes. In addition, half-day sessions on irrigation, general vegetables, small fruit, and melons/cukes will be conducted.

The convention will close on the third day with full-day sessions on tree fruits, small fruit, tomatoes (covering both fresh and processing topics), and cut flowers. Half-day sessions are offered on peaches, pumpkins, fall ornamentals, and general vegetables.

Pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, and small fruit production.

On Jan. 29, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual fruit and vegetable growers dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment by the Biglerville High School Jazz Band.

On Jan. 31, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will each sponsor receptions for growers. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2001 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon on the closing day, Jan. 31.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184; William Tietjen, New Jersey State Horticultural Society, (908) 475-6505; Robert Black, Maryland State Horticultural Society, (301) 271-7491.

For more information on the vegetable, potato, or greenhouse ornamental program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596.

The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticultural Society.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) plus the trade show. Registration either

Busines$ense: Management Training For Dairy CFOs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Dairy Alliance has developed a program to provide hands-on training in data collection and interpretation for Chief Financial Officers (CFOs) of dairy farm businesses.

The program offers a unique combination of formal instruction, group discussion, and hands-on computer analysis in a small group setting, providing participants with the opportunity to learn from each other as well as the instructors.

According to Brad Hilty, information management specialist with Penn State's Dairy Alliance program, "Monitoring business performance is critical to maintaining a competitive position in today's dairy environment."

Key decision-makers of the business must know what data is important and how to interpret it. Hilty said, "The chief financial officer of the business, which in many cases is the dairy producer and farm owner or their spouse, must know how to collect, organize, process, and report data in a format that is more easily interpreted."

Busines$ense has been designed to train key decision-makers of dairy businesses, and those responsible for providing them with the information to make those decisions, in a systematic and standardized approach to data management and analysis.

Instructors are Brad Hilty, information specialist for Dairy Alliance and Jeff Hyde, assistant professor of agricultural economics and farm business management specialist with Penn State's Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology. The program is being offered around the state. Each session begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m.

The Carlise-area series is being offered in cooperation with the Capitol Region Extension Dairy Team at the Cumberland County extension office in Carlisle. Dates are Dec. 18, Jan. 11, and Feb. 15.

The central Pennsylvania area series is being offered in cooperation with Monsanto Dairy Business at Hoss's Steakhouse in State College. Dates are Jan. 4, Jan. 30, and Feb. 13.

Cost of the program is $150 for all three meetings. Additional individuals from the business can attend for an additional fee of $65 each. Contact the Dairy Alliance office at (888) 373-7232 to register. Preregistration is required.

Proposed Milk Pricing Change Could Benefit Producers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A USDA proposal to adjust the pricing rule for Class III milk (used for American-, Italian-, and Swiss-type cheeses) may be beneficial for dairy producers, according to dairy economists.

Cameron Thraen, Ohio State University extension dairy marketing specialist, said that if the new rule takes effect, state producers could earn an average of 55 cents more per hundred weight for their milk. Thraen speculates a final decision won't be made until late winter or early spring of 2002.

"Ohio producers should be in favor of the new pricing rule. They'd be getting more for their milk," said Thraen. "Under the current rule, they are losing 55 cents, so with the new pricing formula, they'd be getting a good deal."

Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy economist, said that Pennsylvania producers could also stand to benefit from the change.

The USDA proposal would modify the Class III pricing formula to increase the relative value of protein in Class III milk by deducting less of the butterfat price.

"The formula tells the producer how much he is going to get," Thraen said. "Under the current pricing rule, the entire butterfat price per pound is deducted, but under the new proposal only 90 percent is deducted which increases the value of protein on a pound for pound basis.

"So, for example, under the old formula if we saw an increase in the wholesale market of butter by 10 cents, with all other prices fixed, the Class III price would go down by four cents. With this new rule that same 10 cent increase actually increases the Class III price by four cents. An eight cent swing in the protein price per pound is a pretty big change," he said.

Thraen stated that the proposed change is an attempt to balance the pricing system among dairy producers nationwide, but believes that the new pricing rule would have a big impact on dairy producers in the far West who sell their milk to cheese manufacturers.

"Idaho, for example, has the fastest growing dairy production in the country that produces milk primarily for the cheese market," said Thraen. "Under the new rule, if dairy producers earn a higher price, then cheese manufacturers have to pay a higher price. Increasing the average Class III price by 55 cents means cheese must bring an additional 5.5 cents on average per pound. While this turns out to be a positive impact for producers, it's the customers who will lose because they'll have to pay more for dairy products."

Under the new rule, states like Idaho would also be at a competitive disadvantage with cheese manufacturers in California who do not use the pricing formula.

California is the second largest cheese manufacturer in the country behind Wisconsin.

Buy New York Fruits And Veggies, Save New York Farms

ALBANY, N.Y. — Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair Bill Magee (D-Nelson) recently hosted a productive roundtable discussion in New York City focused on marketing New York agricultural products in the Big Apple.

"New York City is where the people are and we must commit to assisting our upstate rural farmers with penetrating the downstate urban market," Magee said. "It is mutually beneficial as there is a demand by New York City consumers for the fresh, local products that our farmers produce."

The forum brought out the great success of the Greenmarkets in providing markets for small farms as well as the usefulness of the Hunts Point Terminal Market in providing an outlet for large farms. The missing link seemed to be a wholesale market for medium sized farms that could connect with the many, many restaurants, bodegas, small grocery stores and delis that New York City is famous for.

Among the participants were representatives of Cornell University, Cornell Cooperative Extension, Department of Agriculture and Markets, New York Veal Growers Association, New York Beef Producers Association, Lower Hudson/Long Island RC&D, Food Industry Alliance of New York State, New York Restaurant Association, as well as farmers and consumers.

of lab equipment purchased for $140,000, along with construction of a new conference/ training room.

The total number of samples includes those from Crawford County DHIA herds located in the northwestern part of the state.

In 1999, Lancaster DHIA began a partnership with Crawford County DHIA to provide support and National DHIA accreditation. Crawford County DHIA milk samples are processed in the Lancaster DHIA lab.

Zug said the new facilities will allow for about a year's worth of expansion.

"We should be able to handle short-term growth with no changes," he said.

According to Lancaster DHIA Manager Jay Mylin, laboratory improvements have increased the speed of information flow.

"Our goal is to have your data in the mail the same day your samples are tested in the lab," he said.

Mylin reported that new testing circuits were started this year in Blair County and in southern York County and Harford County, Maryland.

Additionally, with 50 new PCDART herds this year, 230 herds are now using the dairy record management computer software, he said.

Mylin credited the continued success of the program to the high level of commitment of Lancaster DHIA's 60 employees.

"Our field technicians work crazy and long hours to get the job done," he said. "Our lab staff does an excellent job to insure the accuracy of your samples."

Mylin also noted the board of directors' hard work and ability to make tough decisions while maintaining good relationships with members.

President Hershey spoke about the continuing development of Pocket Dairy, a pocket-sized computer that allows herd managers instant, portable access to individual cow and herd records.

About the size of a typical hand-held calculator, Pocket Dairy is used in conjunction with PCDART, but will soon be available to use independently of the software package, Hershey said.

Hershey also reported on Lancaster DHIA's ongoing relationship with Dairy Records Management Systems (DRMS) n Raleigh, N.C.

DRMS provides record-rocessing services to 22 DHIAs cross the country, including Lancaster.

Lancaster DHIA continues to be part of the national DHIA (NDHIA), of which Hershey chaired the Uniform Standards Committee this year.

In favor of Lancaster's continued involvement in NDHIA, Hershey said the organization provides support and training as well as helping to maintain a national DHIA structure.

"You have to be part of the industry," he said. "It makes us part of a national network."

- Brown Swiss, Jobo Holsteins, Gettysburg, 23,645 pounds
- Guernsey, Axel Linde and Millie Widmann, Oxford, 18,832 pounds culture exhibitions" and "commercial agriculture exhibitions" divisions, besides a first place for an agricultural exhibition not connected to the Farm Show for the All-American Dairy Show.

"This is the first time that Pennsylvania has received these awards," said Grumbine, who added that countries such as Canada, Mexico, and England were in attendance and competing at the convention.

Terry and Kandy Landuyt, owners of Kutztown Bologna, which last year went through a devastating fire the morning of the banquet, gave a special recognition plaque to the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber spearheaded a collection to ensure that Kutztown Bologna employees had Christmas money — an effort that resulted in $1,000 for each employee.

Besides recognizing accomplishments over the past year, banquet guests were able to hear about the two exchanges between community and farm members. Michael Wahmann, chief of Lebanon City Police Department, and hog farm owner Marlin Martin each spent a day on each other's jobs.

Although he had no prior farm experience, Wahmann quickly learned about artificially inseminating sows and prepping piglets — after he showered and changed into coveralls and boots.

Following a lunch together with Marlin and his wife, Martene, the pair returned to the barns to work.

grass-fed products.

Dr. John Foster will also bring perspectives on nutrition, focusing on both his research and experience on his biodynamic livestock operation.

Other sessions planned include a veterinarian presenting how water quality is connected to animal health, and a special "Economics Track" which will expose the nuts and bolts of farm finances.

The conference will bring back some favorite topics with a fresh 2002 twist — research on diverse pasture mixes, seasonal dairying, soil fertility, seasonal extension for vegetable production, organic certification, farmer-to-chef connections, new and innovative marketing opportunities, and more.

Lebanon

Wahmann not only enjoyed the job but also the farm atmosphere, as he returned with his grandchildren at a later date to introduce them to the farm animals on the Martin operation.

Martin, who owns a 700-sow unit, ships 300 feeder pigs a week from his 40-acre farm in Schaefferstown. In addition he operates a 32,000-pullet house, along with 100 veal calves that his son Rick takes care of.

Amid much laughter from the audience, Martin described his day of touring the police facility, learning about the procedures of the department, and sitting in on three hearings.

Jean Swift, coordinator of community relations and development for the Lebanon School District, enjoyed herself as she gained firsthand knowledge of the workings of a roadside stand. Because of her educational background, said Swift, she quickly noticed the educational opportunity the stand affords to the children. Swift learned about seed selection, planting, and fertilization.

"When I go to the grocery store now, it's a new experience for me," she said. She was also interested in the photosynthetic process that breaks down the biodegradable plastic mulch. She finished by noting that she was amazed to learn that "those little pumpkins came from seeds — I thought they were the pumpkins that just didn't grow right."

Evelyn Marvel witnessed education in action during her day with Swift, as she was able to sit in on three classes at an elementary school.

In the classrooms she was able to observe the educational and motivational techniques teachers put in practice.

Later Marvel accompanied Swift to the career and technology center for lunch.

Marvel and her husband grow fruits and vegetables on 30 acres. The produce is marketed at Risser Marvel Farm Market in Campbelltown.

Enjoying milk punch while joining in the nativity scene at the reception preceding the banquet is Joel Krall, Lebanon; Steve Brubaker, Lititz; Nate Keller, Manheim; Kristen Stokes, Lebanon; Mike Ecenroad, Myerstown; and Adam Keller, Lebanon. Midway Church of the Brethren sponsored the exhibit.

livestock show, we were very proud. However, it goes without saying that this international recognition is the most prestigious award ever bestowed upon our institution."

A total of 11 categories are judged by a worldwide fair and exposition peer panel, according to Grumbine. Hundreds of fairs and expositions from around the globe enter this competition each year.

About 5,000 people, representing fairs all over the world, were at the convention.

A special reception to exhibit the awards is scheduled next Wednesday, Dec. 12, at 11:30 a.m. in the Farm Show Complex East Building, noted Grumbine.

The IAFE show, which began last Sunday and continued into Thursday, was attended by several staff members of the Farm Show Complex. Members attended from fairs throughout the commonwealth and the nation.

"I bought an Alliance® Unloader because I wanted something I'd be happy with for a long time."

Dave Kauffman
Maplesway Farm
Atglen, Chester Co., PA

Dave's father Tim Kauffman erected the farm's first Harvestore structure in 1981. It was followed over the years by three more. When Dave had the latest 20x90 Harvestore® structure built, he chose to equip it with a new state-of-the-art wide-trough Alliance unloader and soon after, purchased a second Alliance to replace the original unloader in another structure.

Festive Ideas To Duplicate Or Adapt

Christenna Stamm demonstrates using a square of aluminum window screen to form a container filled with greens, dried materials, and handcrafted metallic-painted stars.

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Most creative people like to study craft and decorating ideas, not to copy but to adapt. They might want to incorporate some materials they have on hand or fashion it to fit a particular place.

A great place to find ideas are at the annual holiday programs Penn State Cooperative Extension recently conducted in several different counties. Photographs and ideas featured in this story are from the holiday programs featured by both Lebanon and Berks county extension recently.

Christenn Stamm used a 36x36-inch square of aluminum window screen, two 6-feet lengths of 6-strand copper ground wire, and 32-gauge steel wire to form the wire screen basket shown in the photograph at left.

The wire-screen basket can be spray painted gold, copper or whatever color desired. Insert a plastic or glass container inside to hold a fresh or dry arrangement. Look at the photo for ideas but incorporate materials from your own backyard or from inside your house.

Stamm inserted metallic hearts and stars that she made by cutting out the shapes on heavy white paper. Spray with silver and gold metallic paints. These can also be made as ornaments by attaching silver or gold thread to hang.

Christine Van Meter demonstrated how to make the elevated buffet arrangement. Fill a clear glass vase with pine cones. Attach an 11-inch round plastic dish to the vase using two-sided tape. Fill with a variety of greens and dried materials. Make sure some of the pieces drape over the edge of the container.

Setting a holiday table can cause homemakers frustrations. Gloria Steward, interior designer from Wyomissing, shared several ideas. She recommends using a 60-inch round table so that everyone can face each other and

This old-fashioned way to preserve oranges for holiday decorations and create a spicy aroma throughout the room is to insert whole cloves. Look at these for simple to make patterns to duplicate.

Children's Christmas K.I.S.S. Keep It Simple And Sweet

FREDERICKSBURG (Lebanon Co.). — "At our house, we K.I.S.S. a lot," Cathy Stewart said of holiday preparation.

K.I.S.S. stands for "keep it simple and sweet."

As the mother of Ian, 6, and Jillian, 2, and as a former nursery school teacher, Cathy knows the importance of spending time with children. "Almost everything I do is something that the children can help me do," she said.

"If the activity isn't fun for children, stop it. The important thing is the time spent together doing special things."

Cathy is a strong believer in allowing a child to make things his or her way.

"Don't fix what they make," Cathy said. "My son made a turkey with six feet. It's a special table centerpiece that we get out every Thanksgiving, and I love it."

Cathy, a stay-at-home mom, and her husband Andrew, a dentist, believe in the importance of Presents. We get presents. We get lots and lots of presents.

That phrase keeps running through my mind lately, a little jingle from somewhere in the past. Where it originated in the past keeps eluding my memory. Regardless, it's the message of the moment.

Buy presents. Hide presents. Wrap presents. Show all those you love just how much you love them by showering them with presents. Boost the economy with your presence at the mall buying presents.

On a personal level, someone, somewhere, is sending us some sort of message, based on a recent flurry of presents. I've been finding these surprises on a regular basis in recent weeks.

The barn seems to be packed with them.

When the first one turned up, some weeks ago, it didn't seem that unusual. The first of these many, it came tucked into a bundle of leafy alfalfa hay packaging, decoratively tied with aethestically-pleasing, holiday appropriate, green baling twine.

All that was missing was a pretty, seasonal name-tag with a Santa, snowman or candy cane. Since it had been baled in our fields, stored in our barn...and now I was lugging it around, I assumed it had reached its intended.

Not that anyone else would want the "present:" a grossly-misshapen, green-plastic, one-liter, soft-drink bottle, Flatter than the proverbial pancake.

As you might guess, finding flattened, plastic soft drink "presents" in bales of hay is not rare when the fields from which they are made are intertwined with a network of busy country roads. And people. Lots of people. But the donors of these presents aren't our local friends and neighbors who regularly wave and stop to chat as we work the fields.

These "presents" are left by passers-through, whipping along the local back roads and whipping out their trash into the fields along the way.

And, while plastic bottles are bad enough, an increasing number of an even more dangerous type of hay bale present seem to be turning up: aluminum soft drink and beer cans.

Few things can more effectively squish a paper-thin aluminum can than running it through a square-bale hay baler, which picks up a dried row of hay (and whatever's in there with it), mechanically compresses it into tightly-packed sections and wraps them together. When the bale is opened, the "presents" fall out into the feed trough with the more wholesome hay.

That's when most of the "presents" have been turning up, from numerous bales in this particular batch of calf hay stored in the barn for my feeding use. One especially lethal-looking one is currently displayed in the calf nursery. Bad enough are the sharp, shredded slivers of flattened thin aluminum. Far worse are the razor-like, broken and jagged tips of the squished cans flip-top lid, made of a much harder and less flexible metal.

Finding such presents as they fall out of opened bales of dry hay is one issue. Cattle aren't likely to munch down a whole, but flattened, aluminum can. But tossed cans pitched by thoughtless litterers can be picked up and shredded into stomach-slicing bits by the forage harvester as we put hay silage away. And those jagged, sharp points and bits of metal can easily puncture the fragile tissue of the cow's digestive system.

There is simply no way to know how many animals die each year due to "hardware disease," resulting from ingesting pieces of metal, including that from such "presents." But it happens to too many.

But, back to our hay bale presents. Like most folks, I like to be able to reciprocate to the giver of a present. And if there was only some way to know the donor(s) of these hay bale surprises, I would personally gift the givers with a valuable load of recyclable, organic "used feed," which has already begun the composting process as was running through the digestive cycles of our cows.

Delivered right at their front door would be a handy location.

In keeping with the spirit of the season, we'll even add a sprightly red bow and sprig of holly.

It is time to write Christmas cards, but I'm still thinking about all of the grandchildren who visited us over the Thanksgiving holiday. They range in age from one to 21.

The oldest is a senior at Duke University in North Carolina and the youngest just had his first birthday. Nine of our 15 visited us over the holidays. The oldest girl is studying to be a doctor and lives in Richmond, Va.

Three of the youngest stayed here for several days. Before they arrived I got a box to store my many knickknacks in as I knew inquisitive fingers would carry them away. And, of course we needed rubber bands to keep some of the cupboard doors closed. Sometimes the potato masher and the egg beater were more interesting than his colorful toys. Even I could have played with his toys as today's toys are ingenious.

One evening when our daughter, who lives in Maine, went to her high school reunion the 3-year-old asked me a question. Or rather, he pointed to a picture of my husband and me taken 20 years ago and then pointed to me. He was inquiring about the difference in hair color, I tried to explain that as years go by things change.

Now we do not travel as much. We do not square dance regularly. We do not work as long and as hard. We do not cater to the needs of young children.

Long ago I felt that my parents' social life consisted of visits to the doctor. Now we are not quite there as yet, but with my husband's leg problems, it does take up a lot of time for doctor's appointments. Things do change.

MITTEN 'N SNOWBALL TREATS

8 cups fruit or cocoa-flavored crisp rice cereal
½ cup butter
1 (10-ounce) package regular marshmallows or 4 cups miniature marshmallows
Powdered sugar

Frosting
2 cups powdered sugar
¼ cup butter, softened
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 to 2 tablespoons milk

Place cereal in large bowl. Spray 15x10x1-inch jelly-roll pan with cooking spray. Set aside.

Melt ½ cup butter in 3-quart saucepan over medium heat; add marshmallows. Cook, stirring constantly, until marshmallows are melted (4 to 5 minutes). Remove from heat. Pour marshmallow mixture over cereal. Stir until well coated.

Press cereal mixture evenly into prepared pan using buttered spatula. Let cool 30 minutes.

Turn mixture out of pan onto sheet of waxed paper.

Trace around small child's hand on lightweight cardboard; cut to form a pattern. To make mittens, place pattern on cereal mixture; cut around pattern with table knife. Shape remaining cereal mixture with buttered hands into 1½-inch snowballs. Roll snowballs in powdered sugar, if desired.

Combine all frosting ingredients except milk in small mixer bowl. Beat at low speed, scraping bowl often and gradually adding enough milk for desired spreading consistency.

Place frosting in heavy resealable plastic food bag. Snip off tiny tip from one corner. Decorate mittens with frosting as desired.

10 servings.

Tip: A mitten shaped cookie cutter can be used.

NOEL WREATHS

You can turn these spritz cookies out fast with your cookie press; then fill, "tie" on a cherry bow, and bake.

1 cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups sifted flour
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
¼ cup white corn syrup
¼ teaspoon maple flavoring
Candied red and green cherries

Cream butter and sugar until fluffy in large bowl; beat in egg and vanilla. Sift in flour gradually blending well to make a soft dough.

Measure ½ cup dough and mix with walnuts, corn syrup, and maple flavoring in small bowl. Set aside for filling in next step.

Fit star plate or disk on cookie press. Fill with remaining dough; press out into 4-inch length on ungreased cookie sheets; join ends of each to form a circle. Fill center of each with about a teaspoonful of syrup-nut mixture; decorate with tiny "bows" of cut red and green cherries.

Bake in 350 degree oven 10-15 minutes or until golden. Remove carefully from cookie sheets; cool on wire racks. Store with waxed paper or transparent wrap between layers, in container with tight-fitting cover. Note: Be sure to remove cookies from sheet immediately; center sticks. Makes 4 dozen.

Green Christmas Tree Cookies: Make dough as above but add green food coloring. Use Christmas tree plate of cookie press and add multi-colored sprinkles. Bake at 375 degrees for six minutes. May need to refrigerate for a while so dough will work better when releasing cookie press from sheet.

ANSWER — Wilson Smith, Bel Air, Md., wanted to know the best way to freeze corn on the cob. Thanks to Arlene Hershey, Oxford, who writes that a very successful method she uses is pick corn but do not break husk. Put 6-8 ears in a plastic bag and place in freezer. When ready to cook, remove from freezer and let sit at room temperature for one hour to make it easier to husk. Cook corn. Comes out delicious.

ANSWER — David Simpler, Elkton, Md., requests the recipe for crockpot applesauce. Thanks to Tessie Kizis, Newsoms, Va., for sending the recipe.

Chunk-Style Applesauce

8-10 large cooking apples, peeled, cored, sliced or cut into chunks
½ cup water
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½-1 cup sugar

Put ingredients into crockpot. Cover; cook on low 8-10 hours or high for 3-4 hours. Serve warm. Add cream if desired.

ANSWER — Carrie Schrum requested a recipe for Polish sausage. Thanks to Tessie Kizis, Newsoms, Va., for sending a recipe for Polish Kielbasa, which she believes Carrie may want.

Polish Kielbasa

2 pounds coarsely ground pork butt
¾ pound finely ground beef
1½ teaspoon coarse salt
1½ teaspoons crushed peppercorns
1½ teaspoons marjoram
1 tablespoon paprika
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon honey (optional)
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
6-feet sausage casings (optional)

Sausage casings are available from your butcher. Refrigerated they will keep for two years. If using casings, soak in water for two hours or overnight in the refrigerator.

Sprinkle the seasonings over the ground meat. Knead until thoroughly blended. Form into patties, a meatloaf or stuff into sausage casings by hand or with a sausage horn. Make a large roll or tie off in 5-18-inch links with a string.

Refrigerate in airtight containers for 2-3 days to allow flavors to blend. If you plan to use the sausage immediately, the spices will not be as strong.

Cooking instructions: Patties: Fry until golden brown. Loaf: Set loaf pan in another pan of hot water in oven. Bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours or until meat thermometer reaches 160 degrees. Roll or links: Cover with water in fry pan. Simmer 20-30 minutes. Drain water and fry until golden brown. Or use in other recipes.

Only fresh ground meat should be used because the refrigerator life of preservative-free sausage is only 4-5 days. Curing takes 2-3 days. If you cannot use all the sausage, freeze it. It will keep for 1-2 months in the freezer.

Thanks to David Ott, Coal Township, for sending this recipe.

Italian Sausage

1½ pounds ground pork
1 medium onion, minced
1½ teaspoon salt
1 clove garlic, minced
1 bay leaf, finely crumbled
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon fennel seed
¼ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon thyme
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 feet sausage casings

Mix together ingredients except casings. Add a little water if mixture looks dry. Place in sausage stuffer to fill casings. Makes 2 pounds.

ANSWER D. Groff, Leola, wanted a salad dressing recipe that tastes like that served by Olive Garden Restaurant. Thanks to Pat Johnson, Lancaster, for sending the recipe. She recommends that readers check out the Website www.copykat.com, which boasts "You've tried it in the restaurant, now make it at home! The website has a long list of recipes that tastes almost like those in restaurants.

Olive Garden Salad Dressing

½ cup mayonnaise
⅓ cup white vinegar
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
2 tablespoons corn syrup
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons Romano cheese
¼ teaspoon garlic salt or 1 clove garlic minced
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning
½ teaspoon parsley flakes
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Olive Garden Salad Mix
Sugar (optional)

Mix together all ingredients in a blender until well mixed. If this tastes a bit tart for your personal tastes, add a little sugar.

Olive Garden Salad Mix

1 bag American Blend Dole Salad
4-5 slices red onion
4-6 black olives
2-4 banana peppers
½ cup croutons
1 small tomato, quartered
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Chill one salad bowl in freezer for at least 30 minutes. Place salad mix in bowl. Place on top of lettuce: red onion, black olives, banana pepper, tomatoes, and croutons. Add freshly grated Parmesan cheese if you like, and add plenty of Olive Garden Salad Dressing on top.

ANSWER — Mrs. King, Christiana, wanted to know where mincemeat can be purchased that tastes similar to the homemade variety that contains apples, vinegar, sugar, and salt. She does not want raisins in it. Janet Spangler, York Springs, sends a recipe that is from the Kauffman family Amish recipes or use any recipe and omit the raisins if desired.

Mincemeat

1 quart ground meat
2 quarts cider or grape juice
1 quart sour cherries
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
Juice and rind of 2 oranges
1 quart ground apples
5 cups sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice
Salt to taste

Mix all the ingredients and boil slowly for two hours. Stir frequently to prevent scorching, adding more cider if necessary. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal at once. Cold pack 30 minutes. Can also be cooled and frozen.

Holiday Diet Tips

Holiday parties will soon be here and if you're trying to watch your diet, this time of year can be especially difficult. Clip this column and keep it on your refrigerator for the next few weeks as a reminder to help keep your eating under control. (Remember even five pounds is a lot easier to put on than take off).

Entertaining Tips (When Host or Hostess)

1. Plan and prepare food ahead of time. Freeze until the day of the part to avoid last minute pressure that can lead to extra eating.

2. Plan activities other than eating at celebrations and holidays. Build snowmen, go caroling, try moonlight ice-skating or cross country skiing.

3. Try updating your holiday recipes by using ¼ to ⅓ less fat and sugar than originally called for.

4. Although eggnog is a seasonal beverage, hot spiced tea, wassail or cranberry juice are lower calorie alternatives.

5. Garnish foods with watercress, parsley, carrot curls or green onion fans rather than high calorie toppings.

6. Concentrate on quality foods rather than quantity. Make one spectacular dessert rather than many rich desserts, or serve a fresh fruit platter or a fruit and nut quick bread.

7. Let guests decide how much food they want — don't be a food pusher.

8. Thank guests for high-calorie food gifts, then put out for everyone to share. Parcel out leftovers for guests to take home.

9. Remember to continue to eat regular meals during holiday preparations so you are not tempted by extra food.

10. Invite a friend over as your cooking partner. Encourage discussion rather than snacking.

Entertaining Tips (When Guest)

1. Have a small snack, like low-fat yogurt, before a party if you are hungry. You can relax and visit when you are not starved.

2. Preview food at large buffet-style meals before serving yourself. Choose only those foods you really want to try.

3. Bring a low calorie ready-to-serve dish or flowers as the hostess gift.

4. Collect nibble foods on a plate to help you judge how much you're eating. Take advantage of fruit and vegetable trays.

5. Concentrate on conversation rather than the food.

6. Keep a distance between you and the food-ladden table.

7. Avoid high-calorie alcoholic beverages that may weaken your will power. Mix beverages with seltzer water, ask for extra ice or non-alcoholic drinks.

8. Don't feel pressured to eat more than you need. It is polite to say "no, thank you."

9. Choose single-crust pies over double-crust pies and meringue topping rather than whipped cream.

10. If you do overindulge, don't give up. Instead eat less at the next meal and exercise more.

11. Wear a tight belt; you won't dare overeat.

12. Holiday parties are rarely surprises. Therefore, you can plan ahead and eat less for several days prior to the event so you can enjoy a small dessert.

Festive Ideas To Duplicate Or Adapt

"Think of your table color like an artist," Steward said. Use a cream color as a background, and place one or more square cloths or scarves on top.

Instead of using one large floral table arrangement which can hinder eye contact with those across the table, Steward suggests using several tiny vases of flowers at each place setting or in a straight line through the center of the table.

Don't think that you need to frequent expensive shops for table accessories. Many discount stores sell items that can be used to set a stunning table.

Steward recommends candles in cream, black, or metallic colors. Mix contemporary with traditional dishes. To help the mix-and-match system work, the pieces should include a touch of color that the other pieces have.

Hang a wreath over a mirror.

"Don't overdecorate for the holidays. People should still be able to see your home," Steward said. "A room absorbs a lot of color, but too much color destroys the surrounding colors."

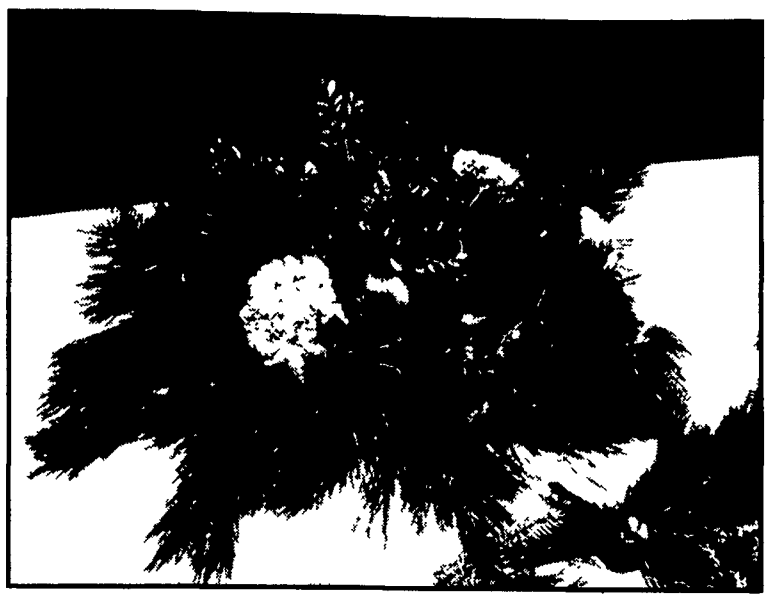
If you like the natural or country look, the Master Gardeners teach many wonderful projects.

String popcorn and cranberry garlands using thin wire or needle and fishing line. For easier threading, allow the popcorn to set uncovered until it becomes stale.

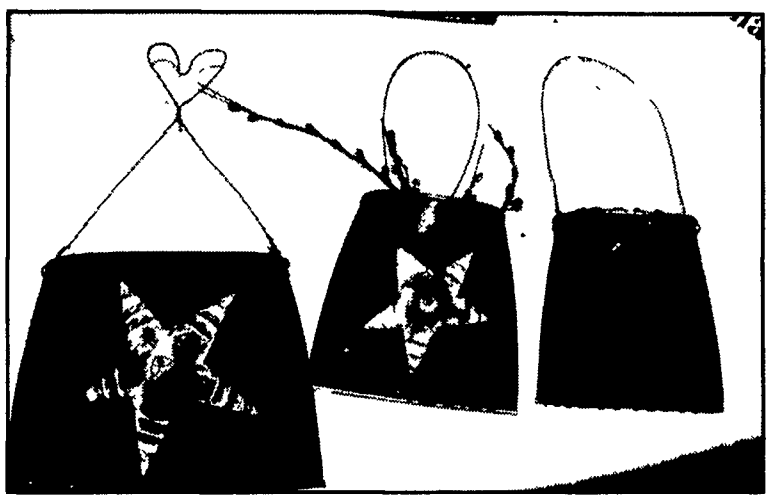
String dried ornamental peppers and dried beans.

For information on the Master Gardener program, call Winifred McGee at (717) 270-4391.

The Lebanon Quilters Guild offers many programs teaching innovative techniques in quilt-making. Meetings are scheduled for the first Monday of the month at 7 p.m. in Freeman Hall of Cornwall Manor, except September and January when the meetings are in the Gateway dining room. For more information, call Christenna Stamm, (717) 273-8374.



This arrangement is easy to duplicate by using boxwood, apples, yarrow, and a mixture of greens. Attach the apple by inserting a flower stick or simply nestle it in the greens.



These rusty pockets so in vogue are made from tin cans. Remove the top and bottom lids, press can in half, and paint with instant rust (available in paint stores). A cotter pin on a drill can be used to make the handles. If desired, cut a star-shape from the lid to embellish the pocket.

Simple is stunning as shown by this antique bowl filled with fruit.

Greens, dried materials, flowers, and pears make this stunning arrangement.

Children's Christmas K.I.S.S. Keep It Simple And Sweet

one-on-one time with children and the need to keep things simple and sweet, especially during the holidays.

Their home is orderly, glamorous, and kid-oriented. Cathy shares ideas for making that incongruous combination workable.

"Have a place for everything and everything in its place. Teach children if they get it out, it needs to be put back before going on to the next project," Cathy said. "They need to do this in school and can learn to do it at home also."

The Stewarts' basement looks like a well-equipped classroom. Shelves line one wall. Crayons, paints, and other odds and ends are placed in child-sized buckets so they can easily be carried by children. Games and toys are arranged on the shelves so that children can reach things they can play by themselves. Those that require adult help are placed higher on the shelves.

A child-size table and chairs near the shelves offers the perfect setting to work on art projects.

A picture frame is simply Ian's handprints painted directly on the wall to form a frame. Each week his mother hangs one of his projects inside the special place of honor.

Hang a large piece of felt on the back of your child's bedroom door. Stick on little remembrances of places your child visits and things they have done.

Children's attention spans are not very long, especially preschoolers. When planning an activity, be adaptable.

"I was helping my son make snowman bookends, but he wanted to stop after making only one. so now it's a doorstop," Cathy said of projects that sometimes end up differently than planned.

"Messy is okay with me," Cathy said.

Simple things often bring children more pleasure than expensive toys. Some ideas from Cathy involve handing a child a bucket of water and paintbrush and let him or her paint the deck and sidewalks. "It keeps them entertained for a long time, and dries without a mess," Cathy said.

Every year Cathy helps her children to make a simple ornament to give to others.

She encourages establishing a lifelong love for reading by giving a special book each holiday to read again and again.

"I spend hours in bookstores," Cathy said of finding special books. She recommends "The Best Smelling Book" and "Auntie Claus," for the season.

Cathy plans "dates" with Ian who is in school full time. She said, "While he is in school, I have one-on-one time with his sister. It's important that Ian have some one-on-one time with me, too."

They often decide together what to do or where to go, which usually includes an out-to-dinner date to make it special.

"Most everything I do is with the children," Cathy said. "There will be time later on to pursue other interests."

Each Christmas season, the Stewarts set up a tree for the children to decorate just for themselves.

Cathy recently presented workshops on projects with children at the Lebanon Holiday Program and at their local library. Cathy is often used as a resource by friends and acquaintances.

"I love to be given a theme and run with it," she said. "I often end up doing birthday parties by request."

Here are some of Kathy's ideas:

• Handpaint a tie for dad. Take a plain-colored tie and have the children place the handprints on the tie using acrylic paints.

• Bathtub painting. When your preschooler is taking a bath, cover his hands with shaving cream to paint the tub and tile.

• While preparing a meal, occupy your preschooler by allowing him or her to paint the kitchen table with butter or whipped topping.

• Make a Christmas tree ornament by cutting out six handprints of your child. Glue together three for the bottom of the tree, two for the middle, and one for the top. Decorate with glitter, stickers, and a star on top.

• Make a reindeer. Trace your child's foot and two hands on paper, and cut out. Glue the handprints on either side of the foot cutout to form the antlers of the reindeer. Cut out a large red circle for the reindeer's nose.

• Crystal ornaments. Fill a widemouthed jar with boiling water. Add food coloring and Borax (available in the laundry section at the supermarket) until crystals do not dissolve. Make a shape out of pipe cleaners. Tie one end of string to pipe cleaner and the other to the pencil. Place ornament in the jar, careful not to touch sides or bottom. Let set undisturbed overnight. Pull out of mixture and dry. Caution: Do not eat!

Here are some ideas from Sandra Parker Hall:

• Make a gingerbread house like those shown on page B2. You will need graham crackers

icing (recipe follows)
frosted shredded wheat cereal candy (gum drops, hard candies, M&M's)

Use the icing like glue to stick the graham crackers together to form houses.

Use shredded wheat for the roof.

Decorate with candies using the icing like glue.

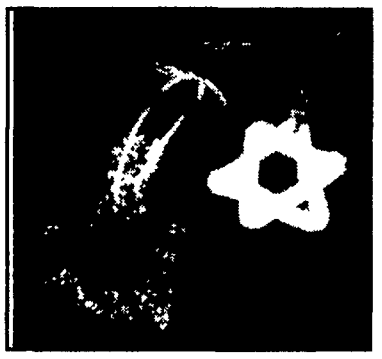
Royal Frosting Recipe

3 tablespoons meringue powder
4 cups powdered sugar
6 tablespoons warm water (for stiffer icing, use 1 tablespoon less water)

This can be stored in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator, rebeaten, and used. Set at room temperature before rebeating.

(ADD KIDS PAGE RECIPE ARTICLE.....

Ian and Jillian make a snowman by using a white plastic spoon. They draw on the face and buttons down the front by using a colored marker. A felt hat is glued on top and a scarf tied around the neck.



Make crystal ornaments following the directions in the story.

Make this reindeer using a paper bag for the face and hand cutouts for the antlers. At right, Ian painted his handprints on the wall to showcase his artwork.

Ian said his favorite Christmas ornament he made is this angel, because it reminds him of his grandmother who died recently. The body is formed from a cutout of his footprint and the wings from hand cutouts.

Tips For Holiday Baking

For many of us, this is the season when occasional bakers enter the kitchen to make traditional family favorites. To ensure success, you might want to review the following tips.

Time-Saving Suggestions

• Read the recipe all the way through before beginning, including the directions.

• Assemble all of the ingredients and utensils needed before beginning.

• Because of the current processing of flour, in most recipes, flour doesn't need to be sifted. Try measuring all ingredients together into a bowl and stirring with a fork to mix.

• To measure hydrogenated shortening, use a rubber spatula to fill a dry measuring cup; then, level off. To remove the shortening easily and quickly, hold the outside of the measuring cup under warm water until the shortening slips out with very little waste.

• Buy nuts and dates already chopped.

• Use non-stick cooking spray to grease baking pans.

• Select recipes that can be mixed one day and kept in the refrigerator until the next day for baking.

• Bake foods ahead of time, and freeze them in airtight containers. When needed, warm the food in the microwave.

More Baking Secrets

• Salted butter may be used in place of unsalted butter and vice versa. You do not need to add more salt to the recipe when using unsalted butter.

• Over-softening the butter can cause cookies to spread. Refrigerate cookie dough one to two hours before baking. If the dough is still too soft, try adding one or two tablespoons of flour. Always cool cookie sheets completely between batches.

• If dough is too dry or crumbly, try adding one or two tablespoons of cream to soften the dough.

• All the cookies on a cookie sheet should be the same size and thickness before baking. If some are smaller and/or thinner, they will bake faster. Also, the oven may heat unevenly. Rotate the cookie sheet halfway through baking. Use shiny aluminum cookie sheets without sides.

• Store soft cookies in a container with a tight-fitting lid and crisp cookies in a container with a loose-fitting lid. Store bar cookies in the pan in which they were baked, covered with aluminum foil.

Art-N-Frames To Go Offers Unique Artwork

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Ceal Eisenhour never imagined that her volunteer efforts would lead into a full-time career.

About seven or eight years ago, she helped frame artwork for a benefit auction for the county's Youth For Christ (YFC) program. Each year she became more involved. Her artistic talents surfaced as she selected mats and frames to accent prints, watercolors, needlework, and sports memorabilia.

Ceal donated some of her pieces, which she calls "quilt art." Anyone who does quilting knows it is time-consuming. In an effort to find more pieces to donate, Ceal scrounged discarded needlework projects at thrift shops and garage sales. This year, she framed 200 pieces for the YFC auction.

"I love making something out of not much," Ceal said of finding scrapes of unfinished sewing projects. For example, in a thrift shop she uncovered a patchwork square of the wedding ring pattern, but it did not lay flat.

Ceal purchased the patchwork square, and removed two pieces so that it would lay flat. She quilted the piece, matted, and framed it. It's a beautiful piece and greatly increased in aesthetic and monetary value since Ceal added her touches.

"I was always interested in art, and my mother was a quilter," Ceal said of the two loves she combined to create original quilt art.

This display shows how Ceal Eisenhour combines her loves for quilts and art.

Ceal Eisenhour finds unique ways to display her love for art and quilts.

"I'm a conservative," Ceal said. "I save every little scrap and find something to do with it.

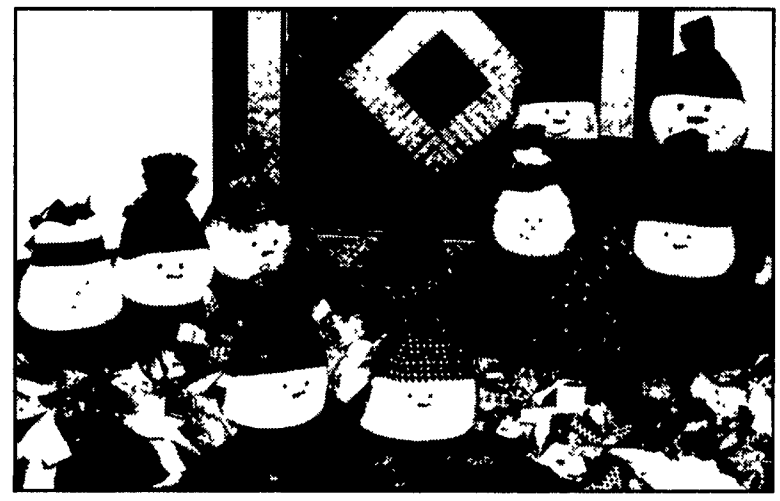
In addition to using traditional homespun cottons, Ceal uses patches cut from flannel shirts, silk ties, and wool skirts. Plaids and stripes running in a variety of directions make up several stunning framed pieces.

"I do one-of-a-kind pieces. I'm not a production person," Ceal said.

She often improvises a well-known pattern because she likes to do things "differently," she said.

For her own home, Ceal often accents her pieces with other artwork that picks up the same colors. A patchwork of shades of red and black plaids hangs on the wall above a lamp with a black-checkered lampshade.

Her work became so much in demand that she now works full-time in her business she calls Art-N-Frames To Go. She has a studio in town and in her home where she frames a large variety of art and her own creative pieces.



Not all of Ceal's projects are framed. These snowball kids are made from the toe and tops of socks.

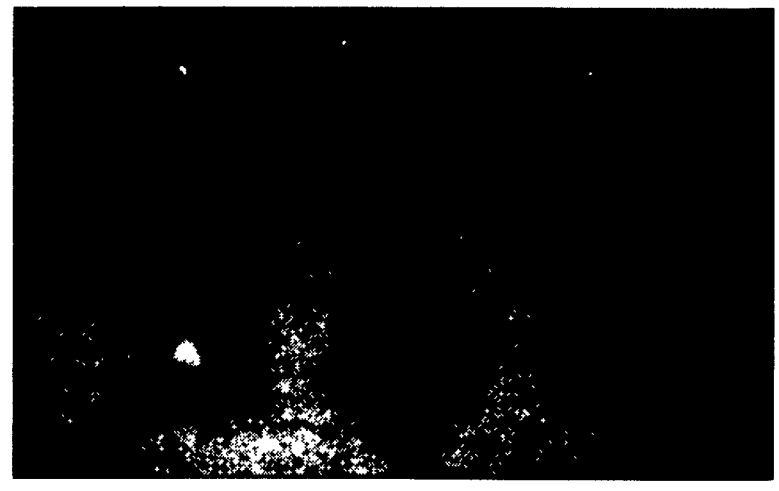
"It's too bad I'm 60," Ceal said. "I have so many ideas I want to try. My advice to others is to do what you love. Life is too short to do otherwise."

Ceal said that she can order pieces from more than 100 well-known artists at a fraction of gallery prices.

Customers often ask her to frame special memories such as a sport's jersey or sports items. She also frames photographs, certificates, and documents.

Her basement has been transformed into a large working area. The walls are covered with a large variety of artwork—her own and other artists, including limited editions, prints-on-canvas, framed memorabilia, and unique, one-of-a-kind items.

This weekend (Dec. 8-9) from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Ceal and her husband Luther are conducting a holiday open house in their home at 546 Hemlock Lane, Spring Hill Acres, Lebanon. For directions, call (717) 272-7215 or (717) 273-6461.



At left, Ceal purchased watercolors of these roosters from another artist. She selected frames and added touches to the mat to accent the roosters. Ceal accents her displays of more than 200 crocks with pieces of her artwork.

Too Much Iron?

WOOSTER, Ohio — Too little iron and too much iron can cause different types of problems. But neither is the best for optimal health.

Iron deficiency can cause fatigue, anemia, and poor blood quality. It's the most common type of mineral deficiency, and that's one reason why iron supplements are so common and why so many cereals are fortified with iron.

However, it's becoming increasingly clear that too much iron can cause problems, too. In fact, a study recently completed by Ohio State University researchers shows that elevated amounts of iron in intestinal cells increases their susceptibility to infection from bacteria.

In the study, researchers used human intestinal cells that are virtually identical those that line the small intestine. The cells were exposed to a common form of iron often used in iron supplements. Then bacteria — Salmonella enteritidis, which can cause illness usually associated with eating undercooked or raw eggs — were introduced.

The results? The bacteria more easily invaded the intestinal cells that had the higher level of iron in them. Plus, the iron-rich environment seemed to help the bacteria thrive. In response, the intestinal cells produced more defense proteins to fight the bacteria. Those proteins can cause localized inflammation in the gut. When that kind of inflammation is excessive, other tissues in the gastrointestinal tract can be damaged.

Foods Dads Can Fix For Kids

Most of the foods children prefer to eat and most of the foods promoted to them are not low in fat, cholesterol, sugar, and sodium.

While there are no "bad" foods and all foods do fit into a healthy diet, there certainly are better choices. Unhealthy eating habits adopted in childhood frequently continue into adulthood. Eating habits contribute significantly to half of the most common causes of death in the United States including heart disease, stroke, some cancers, and diabetes.

Children are very impressionable, and they learn eating habits by watching others eat. As a parent you are responsible for selecting and buying food preparing and serving meals deciding when to serve meals and snacks making mealtime pleasant helping children learn to behave at the table.

When a parent selects and prepares the food choices for the child, the child chooses which and how much of those foods to consume. Parents give kids healthy choices to choose from and this is how a parent controls how healthy the foods are that kids eat. The child still gets to decide.

Parents Making Better Choices

The Food Guide Pyramid, which replaced the Basic Four Food Groups, divides foods into five major food groups: grains, vegetables, fruits, milk, and meat. Each group provides some but not all, of the nutrients and energy children need.

No one food group is more important than another. For good health and proper growth, children need to eat a variety of foods from each of the groups everyday.

The small tip of the pyramid shows fats and sweets, its fine to enjoy these occasionally. These include foods such as salad dressings, cream, butter, margarine, sugars, soft drinks, and candies. Go easy on them because they have a lot of calories from fat and sugars, but few vitamins and minerals. Too much food from the tip of the pyramid crowds out food from the five food groups.

Build your families eating pattern on foods from the base of the pyramid including a variety of grains, fruits, and vegetables. Also choose foods from the milk and the meat and beans group each day making low-fat choices most often.

Easy healthy things to fix An ideal meal or snack is going to include food from as many of the food groups as possible. Keep your child's food preferences in mind as well as the guidelines for a healthy diet. Dads don't have to be professional chefs to cook up a nutritional meal.

To get started cooking with or for kids try the Mexi Potato. Additional tips for success: Read the entire recipe or directions before you begin. Use correct measuring techniques. Pay attention to temperature settings and timing.

Get the kids involved

There are many kids' cookbooks available. Borrow one from the library. When cooking with kids, very young children can help find some of the kitchen equipment (unbreakable pots and pans in lower cupboards), wash fruits and vegetables, peel bananas, help arrange cool foods on a plate or tray, and count the items needed.

Young children can also gather ingredients for the recipes, learn measuring skills by measuring out ingredients, mix ingredients, and scrub potatoes.

Additionally, older children can learn how to safely use a knife and cutting board, cut fruit and remove pits and seeds, chop vegetables, grate cheese, and brown ground beef.

Many adults could stand to improve their eating habits, remember that your children will model after you, make a commitment to yourself and your family to change to a healthier diet.

Mexi Potato
1 serving

1 medium baking potato 1
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons mild salsa
1 ounce shredded cheddar cheese

Scrub potato and pierce with tines of a fork in several places. Place potato on paper towel in microwave oven. Microwave on high (100% power) for 2 minutes. Turn potato; microwave 2 to 3 minutes longer or until potato is tender when pierced with a fork. Carefully remove from microwave. Place on plate; let stand 5 minutes. Slit top of potato. Top with butter, salsa, and cheese. Microwave on high (100%) 20 seconds or until cheese is melted.

Stream MAPS

of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, HR, RI)

Why every fisherman and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish Regardless of which group you fall into, there's a sure way to up your odds . simply try new fishing waters Fish where few ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters many of them overlooked. From Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River...thousands of miles of streams lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45 000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes

Professor Higbee's STREAMS

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3x5 map.

The map sold extremely well – until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized possession Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."
- John Pitarres, OBSERVER-DISPATCH-Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then "Professor Higbee's Stream Maps" are without question the finest."
- Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."
- Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT-Johnstown

York Dairy 4-H'ers Honored At Awards Dinner

Raechel Kilgore scored and spoke her way to the nation's highest 4-H dairy judging honor, winning the prestigious national 4-H dairy judging competition at the 2001 World Dairy Expo. Flanking the national dairy judging champion are her team coaches Paul Knight, left, and Jeff Rutz.

Dairy member Angie Beshore was York County's only 4-H'er selected this year to participate in National Club Congress, held in Atlanta in November. She was recognized during the awards program by 4-H extension's Roxanne Price.

Raechel Kilgore, left, is York County's outstanding 4-H dairy member for the year, with Trisha Knight awarded second-high honor.

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — Raechel Kilgore was both emcee and honoree at York's annual 4-H dairy awards dinner, hosted recently at the county's 4-H Center.

Kilgore, 17, won the nation's highest dairy judging honor in October, topping a large field of competitors during the prestigious national 4-H dairy judging at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis. Along with her first-place individual score, Kilgore ranked second high individual overall in reasons.

The national win came as a highlight of the poised young woman 4-H judging career, which has earned her numerous state and regional honors in both class judging and presentation of oral reasons. Raechel is the daughter of dairy farmers Doug and Pam Kilgore, Airville.

Kilgore and teammates Christi Knight, Justin Hall, both of Airville, and Jacob Hushon, Delta, snagged top honors for York County earlier this year during 4-H state days competition. In individual reasons rankings, Hushon scored at the first spot, Kilgore was second, and Knight, fifth. Coaches for the team are Paul Knight, Jeff Rutz, Cindy Hall and Cindy Johnson, with Knight also serving as coach of the state team.

Adding to her honors for the year, Kilgore was named the county's outstanding dairy member for the year. Second high was Trisha Knight, with Susan Richardson, Fawn Grove, the third honoree.

Winners of the LoBianco dairy scholarship were Sara Grim and Cory Thompson. The scholarship is presented annually by Rick and Beth LoBianco to a selected 4-H member or members in memory of their son, Justin, who was killed in a dairy farm accident several years ago.

Angie Beshore was recognized as the only York County 4-H'er in 2001 who achieved the opportunity to participate in National Club Congress. A longtime dairy club member, Beshore represented the county at the Atlanta, Ga., event, held in mid-November.

The county's three dairy clubs each recognized outstanding members from within their ranks. Central club's rookie winner was Amy Baumgardner. Sisters Kelly Johnson and Terri Johnson were the junior and intermediate age level winners, while the senior outstanding member was Jamie Welsh.

Milk-N-Money club, with members primarily from the southeastern part of the county, presented five awards for outstanding participation. Rookie winner was Frankie Greek, Kyle Miller was the junior winner and Trisha Knight the intermediate honoree. Senior outstanding winner was Raechel Kilgore, and special honors were presented to Cameron Knight.

Wren Anderson was named cloverbud award winner in the Southwest dairy club's recognition of outstanding members. Rookie was Lydia Eddinger, junior winner was Sadye Anderson, Michael Bosley, intermediate and Jessica Fisher, senior.

Two dairy members were recognized as winners of Keystone honors, based on forms submitted through the county. Josh Miller was the junior dairy category winner, and Lee Bosley the senior winner.

Senior and graduating dairy member Jesse Stambaugh was honored for his completion of several years in the county's program. April Daugherty received recognition for serving as a teen counselor at the popular summer farm camp.

Adult leaders are key ingredients to successful 4-H programs. Paula Shaffer received recognition for having served seven years as a leader with the Central dairy club. Jean Knight was saluted for her five years of adult leadership with the Milk-N-Money club.

Clothing Fashions Tell America's History

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

REHRERSBURG (Berks Co.) — Women have long been accused of "needing one more dress" despite a closetful. But Sharon Kramer stuffs a warehouse full of dresses, and she still wants more.

Although she wears a few, Kramer's pleasure from owning the dresses is derived from admiring the pieces and the history they evoke.

"Women did not wear white to be married during Victorian times. Instead, colors were considered more practical, for the bride wanted a dress she could continue to wear for church and social events."

Kramer has a 1889 bustle wedding dress in her collection. It was made of brown silk and worn with a small hat perched atop the wearer's head and a small parasol to carry.

The jackets from that era felt like straitjackets to wearers. "It was a reminder to women to stand erect in a lady-like position at all times. She couldn't move her arms if she wanted to," Kramer said.

"And this hobble skirt was only in fashion about six months in 1918, because it was ridiculous to wear and dangerous," Kramer said of the long, tight-fitting skirt.

Recently Kramer took a few of her favorite pieces and slides of many others to about 600 participants of the Lebanon Extension Holiday Program. The topic showed how fashions repeat themselves.

Kramer started with fashions from the 1790s, when Pennsylvania German women wore quilted petticoats for warmth and covered plunging necklines with lace.

Men of the era, who couldn't afford the popular horsehair wigs, powdered their hair with flour and covered with sugar water to get the desired hair style.

Rodents and lice were attracted to the sweet mess, especially at night. So special cages were devised to keep rodents from nibbling on their hair while the men slept.

It's easy to understand why that fashion did not last through the centuries.

More practical were the styles for women during the same period. Women wore a

This dress modeled by Danielle Luckenbill shows what fashionable young women wore in 1916.

Sharon Kramer arranges a hat during her fashion history talk at the Lebanon County Extension Holiday Program.

Fox furs were the rage in the 1920s. Judy Ziegler models one from Kramer's collection.

In 1890, brides did not wear a white gown to be married. Instead they chose something more practical such as this brown silk with a bustle, which was suitable to continue to wear to church and social functions. The small hat and parasol completed the look.

Fashion

simple linen cap and apron—not for religious purposes. The cap and apron were considered appropriate garb because the cap covered hair that was seldom washed and the apron protected the dress that was also rarely washed.

Women from Lancaster, Berks, and Lebanon counties wore clothes about 10 years behind the fashionable English. Pennsylvania farm women chose dark colors to camouflage the soiled dress, because dresses were seldom washed.

A dress in Kramer's collection from 1835 has a pocket stitched at the bosom. The pocket was to fill with fragrant flowers so that whiffs from the aroma of the flowers blocked out the odor of perspiration from both women and men. It was considered unhealthy to bathe during that era. People thought bathing took oils from the skin and caused colds and illnesses.

The 1856 crinoline wired with cotton casing beneath a wide dress looked elegant, but a woman needed to be very careful. If she walked outside, a wind could whip the crinoline inside out just like today's umbrellas. Also, it was very dangerous to get close to the fireplace. Many house fires were started when the hooped skirt burst into flames.

The 1876 Victorian dresses were often made of heavy material with the richness of brocade. Unfortunately, the back of the dress dragged behind on the floor and picked up dirt inside and outside the house.

Big puffy sleeves made of velvet were the fashion rage in 1892-1895. A dress with leg-of-mutton puffed sleeves was stuffed with crinoline to keep the wide shape. The sleeves were so wide that it required the wearer to turn sideways when entering doorways.

A dress made popular by Queen Alexander featured a high neckline "dog collar." It forced the wearer to keep her head erect so that she did not doze in church.

Many of the dresses are fashioned with small waistlines of only 19-23 inches, considered ideal during that era. This fashion required tight corset lacing. Medical documentation from that era show that women's internal organs were often displaced from the tightly corseted style. It was also quite common for women to faint from the tightness, and smelling salts were often carried.

The Gibson look required the wearer to lean in a forward position so that she would protrude from front and back.

Kramer began her collection when she was 18 years old. She started with those worn by her grandmother. Kramer, 51, estimates that she has hundreds of dresses, boxes of hats, and shoes in a warehouse down the street from her home.

The oldest dress is from 1790, made from fawn-colored silk. It has no buttons or hooks, but was fastened with ties.

In the 1700s, women tied pockets beneath their petticoats to hold sewing items and other objects. Kramer has many of the pockets from the 1700s.

The 1930s is Kramer's favorite for fashions. She said the bias-look popular then is most flattering for all figures. "Peplums (a short overskirt or ruffle attached at the waistline of a jacket, blouse, or dress) covered a multitude of (figure) sins in front and back," Kramer said. Today the vintage look is most sought after by New Yorkers.

Kramer's collection includes high button shoes, hats, and purses of all styles, and little girl dresses with intricate stitching on cotton bastiste.

Kramer said those who are fortunate to have old clothes should not starch them because this entices insects. Instead, wash by hand, dry outside, and store in a white pillow case.

Kramer presents numerous slide show programs featuring her extensive collection. She no longer models the dresses because they are too fragile. Instead, she uses slides of photographed models wearing the dresses before the clothing was preserved.

Kramer is also a certified appraiser of antique and vintage clothing. She is available for slide programs. Call (717) 933-8219.

Artistry Of Arts And Crafts Printed Items

Usually the arts and crafts movement is associated with furniture, pottery, and metal wares. Yet, modestly priced are books and other printed items are also included.

Books can range from auction prices of $200 for an Elbert Hubbard such as Roycrofter's booklet, "A Message To Garcia" to $1,840 for a William Morris, Kelmscott Press edition of "The Poems of William Shakespeare."

Today these examples put printing in the realm of fine art.

Englishman William Morris, already famed as an artist-designer, founded the Kelmscott Press in 1890, inspired by Gothic manuscripts. The emphasis was on heavy type and woodcuts, along with floral borders. The first book published by Morris in 1891, "The Story of the Glittering Plain," was published the same year as a facsimile in America.

CLUES: From the beginning craftsmanship was all important. There were limited editions, produced by hand methods. Book reflecting the Arts and Crafts movement were on quality, heavy paper with extremely black ink and often red accents.

Bindings often had paper-covered boards, vellum with ties and blind-stamped leather.

Illustrations and decorations were produced by woodcut, wood engraving or relief methods.

Sections often began with decorated initials. The result was an overall medieval look.

By 1895 what came to be known as the Arts and Crafts style of printing became popular in America. Not only commercial publishers but dozens of private handpresses were operating on the East and West Coasts and mid-America.

However, the most successful was Elbert Hubbard's Roycroft Press in East Aurora, New York that was the most successful from its beginnings in 1895 until 1915, at Hubbards death. His books were a household name across America. It was a brief meeting with Morris in 1895 that influenced Hubbard and set the style for his printed materials.

Roycroft books used chamois-bindings, old-style type, hand-illuminated initials, imported handmade paper, and bordered title pages.

In addition to Roycroft books, there were mottoes that turn up these days in second-hand stores, framed for a few dollars. Bought at auction, prices are more than $1,000.

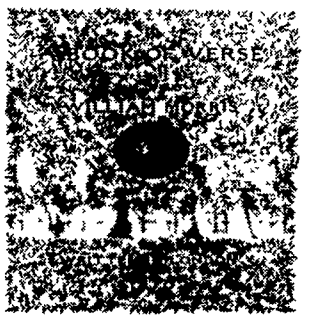
There are woodblock prints, hand colored and signed with Roycroft script mark and orb. One charming example that came to auction said, "I love you because you love the things that I love." It sold for $1,200.

Although rather simplistic, the woodblock prints are an important addition to any Arts and Crafts printed collection. Equally important would be copies of the Roycrofter's magazines.

Collectors look for the first three books from the Roycroft Pringing Shop. The first, and a set that was printed on a Washington handpress was The Song of Songs: Which is Solomon's; being a reprint and study by Elbert Hubbard. It and the second book were printed in 1896; The Journal of Koheleth, and Bible-related. The third book, The Book of Job, printed in 1897, shortened the publishing name to The Roycroft Shop. Only 350 signed copies were printed. It is considered one of Roycroft's most beautiful books with hand-illumined water colors and gold ink.

All Roycroft editions were signed by Elbert Hubbard manually, but not personally.

Other times they were signed by authorized secretaries. It takes an expert to know which is authentic, which makes the book more valuable.



Book of Verse.

Will your soybean choice hold down weeds?
Or hold down yields?

Plan ahead.

You don't have to choose between weed control and yield potential in a Roundup Ready® soybean variety. NK® Brand Roundup Ready soybean varieties give you both. Ask your NK Brand dealer about them today. Together, we'll make sure nothing holds down your bean yields this year.

Mr. Planter Owner:

Thank you for taking a minute to consider this offer.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. is offering our annual off-season inspection and evaluation of your planter for the purpose of identifying worn, broken, or malfunctioning parts. Many times, seemingly insignificant wear will affect the accuracy of your planter more than you realize. If nothing else, it may be time to have your finger pickup meters checked on our test stand. Also, new innovations, attachments and options are constantly being introduced which may be of interest to you for installation on your planter.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. parts and service personnel are specifically trained and informed planter specialists, ready to examine your planter with you! If you determine that the planting proficiency of your planter could be improved with our service, we would be happy to provide that service for you A technician will return to your farm with one of our well-stocked service trucks at a later date to assist you in doing the work. We encourage you to be part of the actual servicing so that any pointers or insight, which the technician may have for you with regard to planter operation, could be conveyed at that time.

What does it cost?

If you set up an appointment for a planter evaluation, you will be charged a flat fee:

4 or 6 row planter	$175.00
8 row planter	$200.00
12 or 16 row planter	$225.00

(Customers over 50 mile radius of Lititz, subject to mileage charge.)

At time of inspection we will recommend to you any item needing attention, also at that time we will remove your seed meters to take in for testing if you so desire.

Your cost of meter testing is $23.95. This includes testing, cleaning, & repair labor (parts not included).

If you have any questions, please contact the service department at 717-626-4705 or 800-414-4705.

Thank you.

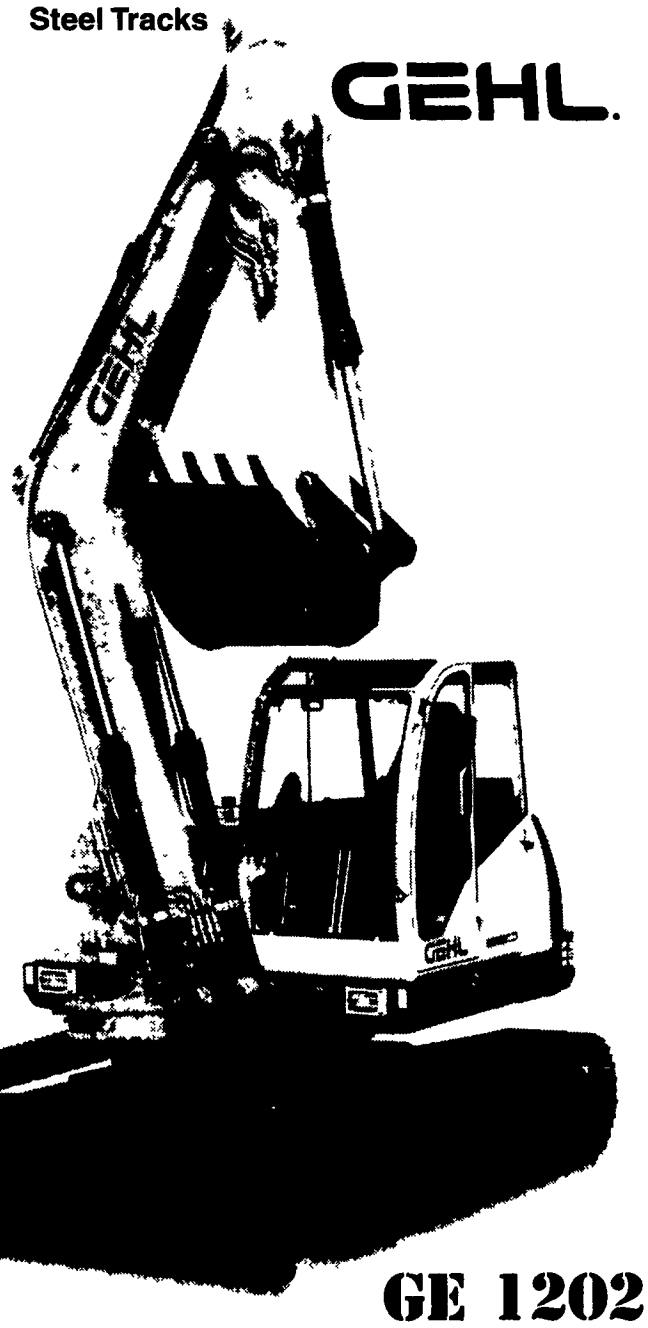
PRECISE CONTROLS
Take advantage of complete rpm adjustment right at your fingertips with total control joysticks. They're pilot-controlled, extremely low effort and operator friendly for higher productivity. ISO/SAE dual control patterns are available as standard equipment.

BEST IN CLASS!

New 12 Ton Excavator with Deluxe Cab, Steel Tracks



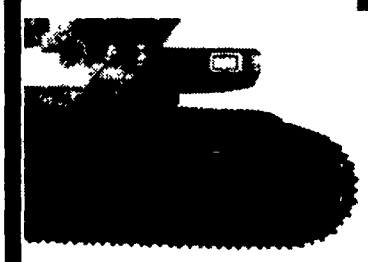
OPERATOR COMFORT
Sit down, buckle up and feel the difference. Our full suspension seat contours to your frame while the hydraulic controls move with the seat to keep you operating smoothly and productively. And our full panoramic view provides great visibility.

STRONGEST

Power and efficiency! The GE1202 is the strongest in its class with 98 hp and runs at a low 2100 rpm for longer life, less noise, less pollution and better fuel economy.

FASTEST

Ready to speed things up? At 4 mph, the GE1202 is faster than any other compact excavator and has quicker lifting ability when raising loads.



HIGH DRAWBAR PULL
With more than 24,200 pounds of drawbar pulll, the GE1202 is tops in its class. Plenty of pushing power for the standard dozer blade. Steel tracks are standard, rubber tracks optional.

MOST MANEUVERABLE

You'll work confidently in tight spots with a 5'5" tail swing - that's 18" less than most comparable models.

LATERAL BOOM SWING
Negotiating tight places has never been easier. Swing up to 80 degrees left and 50 degrees right without even rotating the upper structure or moving the tracks. Dig a wider trench or a square hole and place your spoils with ease - and do it all without sacrificing lift ability! Plus gain the visibility needed for precise m aneuvering.

ACCESSIBILITY
Our hinged cover reveals hydraulic valves for easy maintenance and quick service checks.

BEST HYDRAULIC CONTROL

Tired of the standard three or four hydraulic performance settings? The GE1202 has an infinite range of settings, plus load and pressure sensing valves that allow you to match the application.

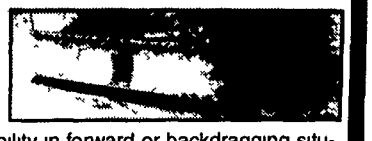
SnowWolf Ultra Series Heavy Duty Skid Loader Plows



Trip Cutting Edge Design
The SnowWolf Ultra features a trip cutting edge design which allows full down pressure for incredible scraping ability in forward or backdragging situations. It eliminates "false tripping" from snow load and will only engage if you actually strike an immovable object

Massive Construction
The SnowWolf Ultra is designed to take abuse from the largest skid loaders. At approximately 100 pounds per foot of plowing width, you know the Ultra means business

Food for Thought
Did you know that a modern skid loader with a high speed transmission and a SnowWolf Ultra will outplow a pickup truck under most plowing conditions? A cleaner job, closer to the obstacles (without worrying about your fenders), and more acres plowed in the same amount of time!

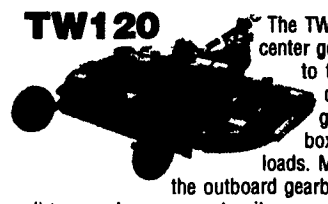
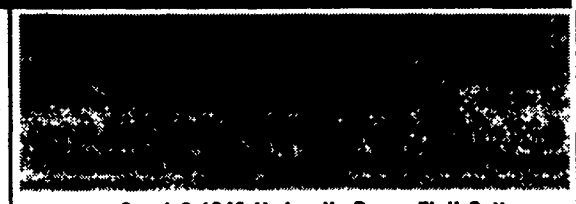
Model R500 - 7 Foot

TW120



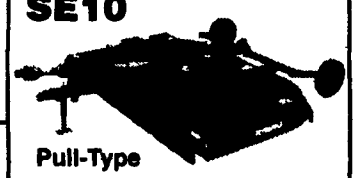
The TW120 cuts a 120" swath of material. The center gearbox, rated at 120 HP, transfers power to the 100 HP outboard gearboxes. Torque dampeners on both sides of the center gearbox help prevent driveline and gearbox damage caused from sudden shockloads. Massive 2-3/8" diameter output shafts in the outboard gearboxes help provide optimum service. The pull-type and semi-mount units require a 50 HP (min.) tractor and the lift-type unit requires a 60 HP (min.) tractor (with adequate front weights).

TW120 - 10' Cut • TW84 - 7' Cut • TW72 - 6' Cut



Servis® 1948 Hydraulic Boom Flail Cutters are designed for mowing grass and cutting brush in hard-to-reach areas including roadsides, ditchbanks, ponds, and fence rows. Large model with up to 18'8" horizontal reach and up to 4" diameter brush cutting.

SE10



Pull-Type

The pull-type SE10 requires only a 45 HP (min.) tractor for economical, wide-cut mowing. A hydraulic cylinder or ratchet lift screw is available for raising and lowering the mower. A spring shock absorber is optional to help cushion shockloads to the mainframe when operating in rough terrain. (Unit shown with optional chain guards. Deflectors are standard.)

The design of the boom arm allows the 2160 to mow on the opposite side of low profile fences for easier fence row cleanup.

Narrow Transport Width. The 2160 can be folded into a transport width of 113" for easier travel on roads and through gates. Replaceable, full-length skid shoes are standard to help prevent wear to the deck mainframe. Rhino Quality

DB150. Over 30 years of hydraulic mower design experience has made the Rhino® DB150 the preferred choice of experienced operators for the mowing of pond banks, levees, drainage ditches, and hard-to-reach areas

The DB150 can extend to a maximum of 158" from the center line of the tractor allowing the 60 inch rotary head to cut areas that are difficult or impossible to reach with ordinary mowers. By being hydraulically driven, maintenance is greatly reduced with the absence of belts and pulleys. The DB150 outperforms many competitive units with smaller hydraulic systems. The DB150 utilizes a 60 gallon hydraulic system which allows the unit to run cooler in tough mowing conditions. The large reservoir also serves as a counterweight and remains stationary on the mainframe, eliminating the potential traffic hazard of a movable counter-balance weight. The DB150 features a heavy-duty three-point hitch using a lower double lug hitch system to fit a wide range of tractors. To help insure a clean cut, the DB150 features updraft blades and a blade tip speed of 20,028 FPM.

GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALERS

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and an 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll, in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward, pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

THREE-BALL TWINE BOX. Twine boxes are designed to keep you going all day long with a convenient storage. They're located in full-size doors that open to provide easy access to baler components like an optional chain oiler system or the Total Density Control components.

GAUGE WHEELS. Allow the pickup to follow field contours while keeping tines out of the dirt. That saves wear and tear on the pickup and means less dirt in your bale. Gauge wheels are standard equipment with the wide pickup and an option with some others.

BELTS. Deluxe balers feature chevron belts (pictured above) with heavy duty, plate-type belt lacing The belts are 6-1/2 inches wide for closer spacing between belts and less space between the belts and side sheets Belts are configured in a staggered pattern to minimize trash build-up.

Crop Preservative

CropSaver™

THE ADVANTAGES OF CROPSAVER-TREATED HAY VS DRY PRESERVATIVE-TREATED HAY
CropSaver-treated hay is greener and more moist
Improved hay bale quality brings a higher sale price
Cows love it and produce more milk when they eat it
CropSaver is chemically buffered, minimizing equipment rust
Dry hay preservatives are weaker, usually labeled only up to 25% moisture, and are more difficult to apply evenly and consistently

Look at These Prices on Cropsaver™ Hay Preservative

We have had our best sales year ever! We made several multiple unit deals with our big customers and as a result, our used equipment inventories are stocked with many good items traded from our local farms. This fall we also bought 11 Case-IH Magnums coming off 3-year leases. These Magnums are very clean and in perfect operating condition.

All our equipment is priced to sell and with the interest rates the lowest they're been in 40 years, now is the best time to invest in dependable equipment. Don't miss this opportunity to get the best deal you are ever going to make. Call a Hoober salesman today!

THE ADVANTAGES OF ROASTED CORN

* Earlier Harvest - Our roaster will dry corn down eight to ten points of moisture.

* Higher Digestibility - Research studies show that roasted corn is more digestible than raw corn. The energy level is increased by 26%.

* Purer Feed - Our flame roaster can effectively remove mold spores and reduce toxin levels that are harmful to livestock, swine and poultry.

* Drier Total Ration - With less fermented feed. Supplementing the hay and corn silage diet with dry corn aids better rumin health.

* Greater Profits - Dairy herds fed roasted corn advance two to eight lb. per cow in milk and improves herd health.

Varner Farm A Favorite Stop For Montgomery County Customers

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Nestled among eastern Pennsylvania towns and edged by housing developments are the 90 rolling acres that comprise Varner Family Farm.

The farm, which is in the Montgomery County Farmland Preservation Program, stands in contrast to an increasingly urbanized area.

"Most of the farmland around here is growing houses," said Varner. Besides homes, also located nearby are large pharmaceutical companies.

The Varners, however, have been able to take advantage of the marketing opportunity that has presented itself.

The flowers, produce, and 'pick-your-own' option for the small orchard, pumpkin patches, and Christmas trees make the farm a favorite stop for customers.

"The reason we're going to 'pick your own' products is because that's what our market wants," said Varner. "We've realized that we're in the entertainment farm business.

"Part of our marketing strategy has always been the farm. That's our niche."

Starting With Trees

A graduate of Delaware Valley College, Varner got his bachelor's degree in horticulture before coming back to apply his knowledge to the farm.

The land that he grew up on, and is now farming, deeds back to his grandfather in 1820. Varner's father, Bob, sold the dairy operation when Rob was a child and rented out the acreage.

SELLING MABEL PEACHES BEFORE THE GUY NEXT DOOR DOES!

Selling at growers' markets is always a challenge and is probably as much an art form as it is a business for those who are successful in the venture.

Customers can range from rude and cheap to those willing to try any of your new products at whatever the price you set.

Your best supporters are asking the other vendors where you are when you don't show up at the market one week. Customers are your lifeblood and appealing to their needs and wants is what makes you successful or not (with success being defined here as profitable).

So how about a few marketing tips before you set up for a new marketing season?

Sell yourself first: a good marketer knows it's not always what you sell, but instead how you sell it. Think back to the image you had at the market last year. Were you seen as a seller of quality and freshness or a wholesaler of quantity? And what is the first impression to people as they walked up (or right by!)? Did they see something that enticed them to stop and take notice?

IPM For Cut Flowers

Lately I've started to receive questions and phone calls regarding production of cut flowers. This interest in flowers is consistent with the trend for producers of all crops looking for new items to grow to help increase revenue in their operations.

Unfortunately, like many of the other "specialty" crops I'm asked about, there is no one complete resource I can refer a potential producer to regarding cut flower production. There is some information available regarding cut flower production but it must be collected from a variety of sources.

One particularly difficult area to find information on regarding cut flower production is pest control. This is most likely a result of two factors: first, the great variety of flowers that can be grown (and thus a wide range of pest problems) and second, the lack of chemical controls available for some of these crops.

The small total acreage of any one type of flower pro-trees for Rob. When he grew old enough to take over the farm, then, he and his father planted acres of Scotch Pine in the spring of 1993. His first experience with the trees gave him a few important lessons.

"I planted too many trees all at once," he said. "I also didn't know our market. We're primarily a Douglas Fir and Frasier Fir market."

For other growers, Varner recommends calling other landscape, nursery, or Christmas tree operations before planting. "Get to know your market base and what your customers want," he said.

Today the farm hosts 10 fields that are seven acres apiece. A field, after it is opened for cutting, is cut for two years. Each Christmas the Varners open a new "block" of trees.

After the ninth year of use the stumps are cleared, the ground is rototilled, and pumpkins are planted. According to Varner a tree requires seven years to grow six to nine feet.

A Variety Of Offerings

From Easter flowers to field mums to Christmas arrangements the flowers, either loose or finished, not only decorate the store but are for sale much of the year. Pottery, crafts, and craft supplies are also part of the store. Annuals, perennials, or hanging baskets are also offered. Approximately 300 plants are sold as nursery stock for landscape operations by appointment.

The flowers are a contribution of Christine, Varner's wife. Christine, from Schuylkill County, has grown flowers since she was a freshman in college and also ran her own dried flower shop for six years. She has since put her business and flower expertise to work at the family store. The couple met at a produce auction.

Pick-your-own strawberries are one of the summer's first offerings. Tree-ripened peaches, 12 acres of them, also provide picking opportunity for visitors.

Christine and Bob also make peach and strawberry jam to stock store shelves.

In addition five hives provide honey for the store.

If customers can't visit the orchards during the summer, fall brings a time to pick-your-own apples. A cider press provides the fall drink for customers to try for 35 cents a glass, or to take home in larger quantities.

To test the several varieties of apples offered, customers may buy an apple for 45 cents.

Two tractor-drawn wagons and two teams of Belgian horses take visitors to seven acres of pumpkin patch, where they select their own pumpkins.

The Varners have four full-time employees who have a short break after the rush of Christmas season before coming back to work Jan. 10, when they begin pruning apple trees, plan and organize for the coming year, complete maintenance or construction jobs, or split and sell firewood. Plans for the upcoming season include implementing the vertical axis system on the pick-your-own peach and apple trees.

Fieldwork begins in March. "As soon as we can get in the field, we'll start digging," said Varner.

"We used to be open just at Christmastime," said Varner. "In 1987 I was going to start strawberries. I had the ground worked up and I missed the window for getting them in, so I started research for a crop that I could still get in, so I planted pumpkins," he said. The pumpkin season was augmented by cider, as the Varners started pressing and selling their own cider, and a multi-seasonal business was launched.

"We decided to open for the spring market and expand," Varner said, "Now we usually kick off with Easter flowers. We try to market just what we grow — that's just the way we've always wanted to do it."

Besides the pumpkin people, or the variety of gourds, or the cider press, or double-fenced petting zoo, a cornstalk and hay bale maze entertains children on the farm.

Weekends bring the opportunity for children to paint their own pumpkin or make their own scarecrow. During the week the Varners also host school tours. After students are taken on hay rides around the farm they are given a small pumpkin.

"We talk about the history of the farm," said Varner. "We tell them about the crops on the farm, how long it takes for things to grow, or the benefits of trees."

Not only providing an experience but also adding agriculture education is important. "We try to teach as much as we can about farming," said Varner, who hopes to use the horses for plowing demonstrations.

Christmas Is Coming

"Once October is over, there is a mad rush for two weeks to switch everything to Christmas," said Varner. The business is open seven days a week for the Christmas season.

To beat the holiday rush, the Varners put up Christmas trees in their own home early in the season. "Last year we put five trees in the house," he said.

Twenty men and approximately eight women help part- time during the Christmas crunch time.

"At Christmas time, we have backup of everything. We have to keep things moving. We may do several hundred trees on a Saturday. Everything will run smoothly as long as we don't get backed up on in one area."

Buying a Christmas tree at the farm fits into their entertainment farm idea. The Varners and employees work to make their customers' tree-picking venture a true holiday experience.

"We provide them with a saw and take them to the fields," said Varner.

Customers cut the tree and bring to the loading station. The trees are shaken with a shaker to get rid of the dead needles before the tree is pulled through a string baler to ready it for easy handling and transport. Workers will also drill a hole in the bottom of the tree so it will sit straight up on a peg on a special tree stand.

When visitors return to the store they hear the strains of Christmas carols and may take some of the free hot chocolate and hot cider, besides a coloring book for the children, that are offered.

Besides the Christmas shop and holiday displays in the store, a train display in the second floor of the store is a draw.

January Planning

January is a month to look back, reflect, and readjust. "A big part of January is deciding what worked and what we did well. We sit down with key employees to try to find the weaknesses and strengths and build on the strengths to try to do better.

"You are going to make a mistake. You just have to move on, you can't ever give up.

"My grandfather used to say, any overnight success takes a minimum of 20 years.

Best Plants For The Garden: Gold Medal Winners Announced

PHILADELPHIA — The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society (PHS) announced winning plant selections for the 2002 Gold Medal Plant Award at its biannual meeting of nursery and horticultural professionals.

The four top choices for best woody ornamental plant went to Buxus sempervirens 'Vardar Valley' (Boxwood Shrub), Campsis grandiflora 'Morning Calm' (Chinese Trumpet Creeper Vine), Malus 'Adirondack' (Crabapple Tree), and Physocarpus opulifolius Diabolo 'Diablo™' (Eastern Ninebark Shrub).

The Gold Medal Plant Award program, begun in 1978, recognizes exceptional woody plants hardy in growing zones from New York to Washington, D.C. Tried, tested, and proven, all Gold Medal awardees are adaptable and make excellent choices for landscaping. Easy to come by, they make a fantastic contribution to regional gardening efforts and provide a year round structure for good garden design. To date, 77 plants have been awarded the "PHS Gold Medal."

Home gardeners and horticulturists can find out more about all Gold Medal Plant selections along with plant profiles and buying information by visiting www.goldmedalplants.com or by mail with a 55 cent SASE to Gold Medal Plants c/o PHS, 100 N. 20th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103.

Varner Farm

"If I had it to do all over again, I'd do everything a lot bigger," said Varner. After the pavilions were built they were enclosed to add more room for store merchandise. The family has plans to build out front with windows all around to expand the dried flower area.

They are also developing a kitchen area to make more jam and add caramel apples. Someday Varner hopes that the loft area will host only trains.

"We just try to add a little bit each year," he said.

"Our goal is to eventually buy a satellite farm where we can start growing Christmas trees," said Varner, who also wants additional acreage for the additional horses he would like to buy for the wagon and hay rides.

"Farming is not a quick-rich scheme, but it has overwhelming rewards. There is satisfaction in being able to work the land and raise a family in that environment.

"A lot of people come in and tell us how lucky we are and I tell them, 'the harder you work the luckier you are'."

duced nationwide means it is not financially profitable for the chemical companies to go through the expense necessary for registering each type of flower on a chemical label. Fortunately, the situation is not totally hopeless, because there are materials available to cut flower growers for pest control. But the limited number of choices available means that it would be beneficial to a cut flower grower to practice integrated pest management (IPM).

Using IPM to produce a flower crop means that chemicals are only one part of a grower's plan to control pests. IPM means a more continuous or season-long management program rather than a reactive program whereby pests are controlled only when they are seen. An important part of the IPM strategy is to try, whenever possible, to prevent pests from reaching damaging levels in the first place.

General IPM Principles

Good production practices are the first piece of an IPM program for cut flower production. Start with proper crop rotation. Never grow members of the same plant family in the same location/plot within a two- to three-year period (longer if possible). Also, always grow your flowers in a well-drained location on the farm to reduce the chances of root rots getting started.

Proper irrigation management (not keeping the soil too wet) will also help lower the chance of developing root rots.

Finally, maintain plant vigor. An actively growing plant is naturally more resistant to disease and insect infestations.

Control perennial weeds the season before planting your flowers. Cultivation and/or chemicals can be used to destroy weeds that will be difficult or nearly impossible to control when you have a flower crop in the field. Also, after a crop has been produced, do not abandon the field and allow any weeds present to set seed. Consider using cover crops in fields that are not going to have any other crops grown on them for an extended period of time.

The final part of a general IPM program is to become familiar with the insects and diseases that are most likely to infest the types of flowers you plan to grow. When in the season do they appear? What do early symptoms look like? Almost all pests are easier to control if discovered early while the population or infected area is smaller. Scouting your flower fields on a regular basis will help you detect any developing pest problems.

IPM For Weeds

Consider the use of plastic mulch for cut flower production. Not only will this reduce your weed population, but it can conserve soil moisture as well. I have not seen any studies showing production advantages of any of the colored mulches, so use whatever type of mulch is least expensive and prevents weed growth.

Be sure to control weeds in the field while they are still small. Cultivation, mulching, and herbicides can be used to prevent weed growth in row middles.

Penn State has a publication listing herbicides labeled for use around common cut flowers. Contact your local extension office for a copy. Be sure to read and follow all label instructions to prevent crop injury. Also, verify your specific flower crop on the label prior to using, since labels seem to be changing regularly these days!

IPM For Insects

Insect problems will vary from year to year and crop to crop. Hot, dry summers will result in more problems with grasshoppers, spider mites, and thrips. Aphids and leafhoppers are other common pests.

Scouting and identifying insects early is an important component of a control program. By identifying "hot spots" in your field, you can possibly use spot spraying to achieve satisfactory control.

Naturally occurring parasites and predators can sometimes control insect pest populations. If you plan to use this method of pest control on your cut flowers, then you must avoid cover sprays of long residual insecticides.

You can also purchase and release beneficial insects such as lacewings and ladybugs in your fields. If you are using natural insect control, then you should also be using biorational sprays of horticultural oils, insecticidal soaps, or neem oil extracts. Note: it is easier to manage one type of insect on one type of flower than it is to manage several types of insects on a range of flower types.

IPM For Diseases

Fungal diseases can be a significant problem on cut flowers, especially during wet growing seasons. You can have a perfect flower, but if it has diseased foliage, it will be unmarketable.

Your disease control program should start with promotion of good air circulation in your flower fields. Use proper in-row and between-row spacing and increase these distances if disease is a recurring problem. Select disease-resistant varieties whenever possible.

Control insects that can spread viruses. Practice good sanitation by removing spent crops and badly diseased plants.

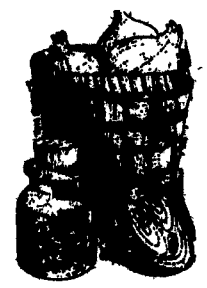
Generally, there are three diseases that affect flowers: root rots (discussed already), botrytis, and powdery mildew. Botrytis can be especially troublesome in periods of cool, wet weather. This disease can attack most any part of the plant. Overhead irrigation can also promote botrytis. Controlling botrytis with fungicide applications is generally needed under wet conditions. Removing infected plant parts can sometimes control minor outbreaks, especially if the weather will be dry.

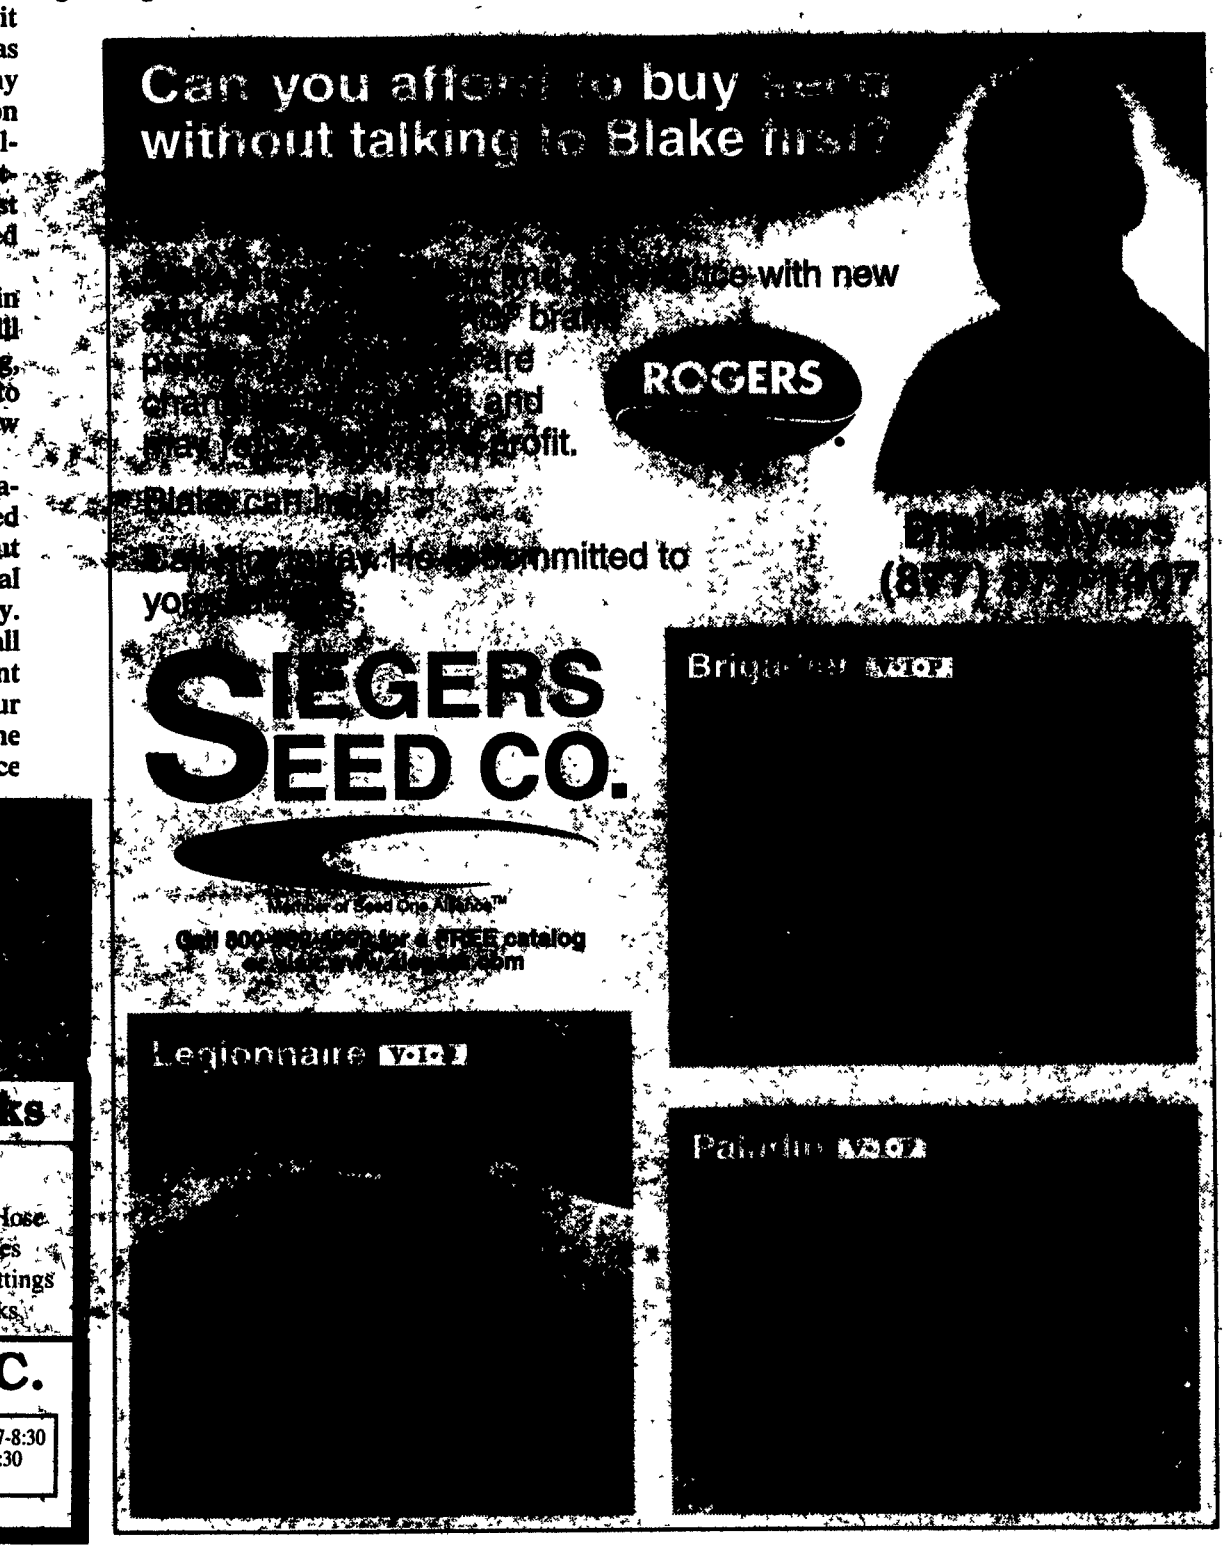
Powdery mildew is a commonly occurring disease on many horticultural crops in our area. Some species of flowers are particularly prone to this disease, including aster, campanula, and delphinium. Conditions that favor mildew development are warm, sunny days and cool nights with high humidity.

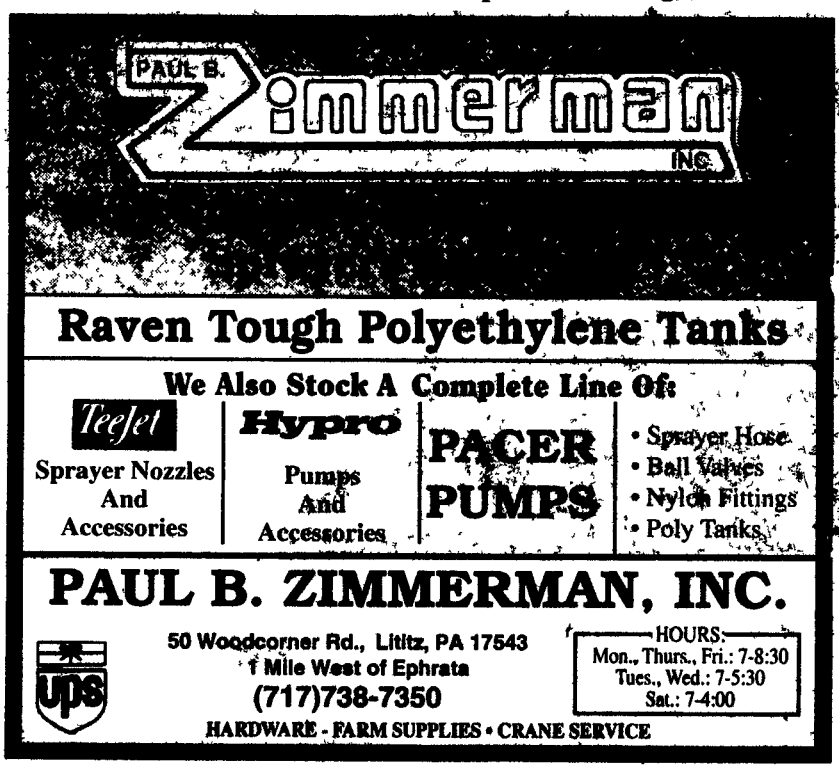
Powdery mildew should not be a problem when temperatures are above 86 degrees Fahrenheit. Rainy periods can actually reduce the incidence of this disease because rain washes the spores off the leaves. Fungicide applications are often necessary to control this disease, because uncontrolled infections can rapidly spread throughout a field under ideal conditions.

While there are many challenges to growing cut flowers, it is no more difficult than producing any other horticultural crop such as vegetables or fruit. I encourage interested growers to gather as much information as possible before starting into this new enterprise. Then, start slowly in order to reduce losses during the "learning curve."

Cut flowers have the potential to be a very profitable addition to your farming operation if proper cultural procedures are followed and the crop is properly marketed.







The Farmstand: Direct Marketing Tips

Be honest here, or better yet ask someone you trust to give you their thoughts of what they liked and didn't about your operation. Most importantly, look through the eyes of your customers, — this is about appealing to them, not just making it easy for you to set up in the morning.

And what have you changed for 2001? How about that new sign you talked about having made last year or upgrading the tent you set up under? People like to see something new, and your changes could easily make a better bottom line.

Image of marketers: along the same line, what does your customers see when he looks at you? Although the normal customer doesn't expect you in a shirt and tie, they do expect the shirt to be clean. You're a farmer selling fresh, quality products for their consumption. Have a certain air of quality and freshness to your own appearance. They want to know you labored to pick the items you're selling only two hours ago, but they don't want to smell the sweat that went into the effort.

Freshen up quickly coming out of the field, change your shirt to the one with your farm logo on it, and wash your hands after you set up for the day. Your image should be about quality, not just what's on the table. And try not to eat or smoke in the same area your selling in. Many customer are offended by seeing this and there could be food safety issues as well.

Displays: This is where the art of marketing comes in and some people are truly gifted in setting them up. If this is a challenge for you, then when you are on your "break" for a quick snack away from the table, look at the displays of your successful neighbors. Start with a very attractive sign, use clean, new containers, and have a freshly washed table covering. If you use price cards, put your farm or market name on them and reuse them as few times as possible. Once dirty, toss them and use new ones. If they are handwritten and your writing is bad, have someone else do them for you and bring a few spares. Try to keep a consistent look and make the pricing easy to read. Many consumers will avoid a purchase if they can't find a price and they have to ask.

Are adjustments needed in the physical layout of your marketing space? Does your table have one long front edge at the drip line of your tent? Or can people walk "into" the display because of semicircle layout where they are now surrounded by your offerings?

And speaking of tents, is the front entrance high enough or is it at an awkward height for customers when they are standing there? If they can step out of a drizzle or the sun on a hot day, they probably will stay longer and give you a greater chance to sell them something.

At a growers' market, the tent becomes a visible part of the display and the $10.99 blue tarp you bought from the local discount store will be helping their bottom line, not yours. With displays, think color, think diversity, think quality, and certainly change them every few weeks.

Highlight something: Are you offering organic cheese for the first time this year? How about a new handmade craft, a grower's market cookbook, or a new processed item? Find a spot in your display where it can be prominent and have eye appeal. This is particularly important with newer varieties of produce, especially if they are not common to the area.

Feature recipes along side for people unsure how to prepare the item. Increasing numbers of consumers are unsure how to prepare basic produce. If you have something unusual and you want it to sell, explain how great it is, how you have used it yourself, and how they can make a wonderful meal from it tonight.

And don't forget samples. Although not everything is workable as a sample and some items have food safety and regulatory issues attached to them, offer samples if you can. This is cheap advertising and one of the most commonly overlooked techniques of marketing.

And when offering samples offer them personally. Don't just put them on a plate with a sign, but when the customers aren't three deep at the table, hand people a sample on a napkin or small container. It gives you a chance to open a friendly conversation with the customer, and talk about the item and others you're offering.

The rapport you can build through that simple act will develop a strong loyal customer base in a short time. This is a good time to highlight something as a "special." Just because it's on special doesn't even mean it has to be cheaper. But if you do have an abundance of something one week, tell the customer it's on special not because of quality issues but because of extra production, and they are the benefactors. Perception counts in most aspects of marketing, especially here.

To be a successful marketer, be fearless, have a "can-do," spirit, and never think you have the perfect set-up. Always be looking for ways to improve, entice your customers' desires at the market, and find innovative ways to offer them what they are asking for — even if they haven't yet asked!

CROP MARKETING PLAN

Every businessperson eventually becomes involved in finance, production, and marketing. These three activities are essential to effective business management. While most farmers describe themselves primarily as producers, they also have to finance and market what they produce.

Fortunately, good producers can be good marketers because smart marketing begins with an idea of the cost of production. Managers who market without an idea of their cost of production can only concentrate on enhancing the price they get for their product.

It's like driving a car that only has a front window and no side or rear windows. As long as everything runs smoothly, it can be OK. But any setback must be handled with incomplete knowledge.

Those who market with an understanding of their cost of production can make decisions about what is an acceptable price, what price will cover certain critical costs, and what are the risks of not taking a price when it is offered. Using the analogy of the car, it provides front, side, and rear windows so that the decision-maker can make both offensive and defensive decisions.

The marketing plan described here is intended, first, to cover as many of the costs of production as possible and, second, to maximize the price received for commodities produced. Many farmers try to maximize price before they have implemented strategies to cover all costs. While marketing in this manner is the prerogative of the farmer, it is not the approach reviewed in this guide. The marketing plan discussed here focuses on relatively simple and available strategies that can be used to increase income and reduce risk.

A Three-Step Process

A business-oriented marketing plan includes the following three steps:

1. Estimate your cost of production and expected break-even price per unit of commodity, e.g., bushel, pound or hundredweight.

2. Determine your marketing plan - how much you are going to sell at what price.

3. Develop a follow-through plan.

Your Cost Of Production

Good producers can be good marketers, because smart marketing is aided by a thorough understanding of the production process. By analyzing the production process, managers are able to estimate costs of production.

Each productive activity involves the use of inputs and services. By listing the activities, you can estimate prices to cover each activity and eventually the whole production process.

The best source of cost information is an internal review of your own production activities and costs of production. A record-keeping program that tracks all of the costs of production provides a historical perspective on costs. These are coupled with estimates of input use and prices for the coming production year to develop a projected cost of production for the coming year.

A good cost-of-production worksheet should contain sections detailing the operating and ownership costs incurred in production. These details give perspective on which costs are cash costs and which are not. Cash costs are those expenses, such as seed and fertilizer, that require cash to be paid to the supplier. Noncash costs include depreciation in equipment and land interest for owned land. An understanding of the nature of the costs (operating and ownership, cash and noncash) helps establish target prices.

The marketing plan, no matter how good, may not be able to lock in prices that cover all costs of production. Key target prices that compensate for critical costs are important to have in years where opportunities to cover all costs are limited. In the absence of your own cost estimates, you can use published costs of production, available from extension and other sources. However, these cost estimates provide only rough estimates of fixed and variable costs of production and do not have the detail necessary for personal business analysis and marketing.

The Marketing Plan

The primary objective of a marketing plan is to cover as many costs of production as possible. Use the cost-of-production estimate discussed above and begin to set target sales prices as follows:

1. Estimate the outcome of different pricing alternatives.

2. Determine a target and quantity to market.

Estimate Different Pricing Alternatives

Consider several marketing opportunities from cash sales to forward contracts to futures and options. Basis information for your local market is necessary to analyze the futures and options marketing alternatives. The result of considering all marketing alternatives is to arrive at expected prices for all marketing alternatives.

These expected prices can be compared with the cost of production. Whether the current expected prices exceed or are less than the total cost of production, the decision becomes one of marketing a certain percentage of expected production now or taking a risk that a higher price can be obtained at a future date.

Determine A Target And Quantity To Market

Anytime a manager is waiting for a higher price, the possibility of getting a lower price exists. From this perspective, a marketer needs to have both a defensive and an offensive strategy.

The offensive position indicates that you will sell when the price rises to a certain level and you are able to cover pertinent costs. The defensive position is the price at which you will sell some of your production in an attempt to lock in income you might otherwise lose.

The target consists of a trigger price and quantity to sell for both an offensive and a defensive position.

The trigger price is the price for each marketing alternative that will create a response from the marketer. When the expected price reaches the trigger price for either the offensive or defensive plan, a sale is initiated. The quantity you decide to sell under each plan determines how much of the expected production you will market at different times. Your goal is to maximize the price you receive while minimizing downside price risk.

The Follow-Through Plan

Once the target table is completed, the markets must be watched to determine when either trigger price has been reached. A key to effective marketing under this plan is to have a method of following the markets. Futures prices can be tracked by having continuous market information delivered to your office, using daily or weekly closing prices, or giving your broker or elevator manager authority to conduct the trade.

Because the trade will be initiated at an unknown time in the future, it is necessary to make arrangements that facilitate quick trading. Open any necessary accounts with a broker and banker. Have forward contracts ready to be signed and delivered. When a trigger is pulled, the decision should be easily implemented.

Stick To Your Plan

Because marketing is an emotional activity, it is important to have someone to keep you accountable to conduct trades at the predetermined triggers. If prices are moving up, the tendency will be to postpone pulling the trigger because a higher price surely is ahead. When prices are moving down, optimism says they will bounce back and you should wait for the rebound. This is not objective marketing.

You set trigger prices in an attempt to capture an acceptable price without undue risk. Because you market only a portion at each target, the price expectations experienced at each trigger can be built into future targets.

Accountability can be obtained by having another person know and understand the marketing plan. Spouses are often in a good position to implement a marketing plan because they may not feel as attached to the production as the person producing the commodity. When the target is reached, your spouse can remind you to initiate a trade. Marketing clubs, brokers, and business partners can also serve as reminders to trade. Giving authority to grain traders to initiate a trade at certain targets can also be a way of keeping to the plan.

Aim At A Second Target

Whenever a trigger is pulled, aim at a second target. Select both offensive and defensive trigger prices, along with quantities to be marketed. The process of setting a target, pulling the trigger at key points and aiming at another target repeats until all of the production is sold.

Marketers need to keep track of what percentage of expected production is forward priced so that they do not oversell as they repeat the marketing plan. Portions of the marketing plan worksheet assist producers in tracking what percentage of expected production is already forward priced.

Marketing Tips

The plan described here is an attempt to introduce objectivity into the marketing process. Other things need to occur to market production successfully. The following tips should help make your marketing more successful.

- Don't market all of your production at one time — especially anticipated production. Grain in the field is not as sure as grain in the elevator. Forward price less than 75 percent of your expected production.
- Remember your strengths. Most farmers prefer production to marketing. Focus on production. Market as objectively as possible according to plans.
- Keep an eye on your financial position. Leverage and liquidity problems can wreak havoc on your finances and marketing plans. Having to sell to meet financial obligations is not part of the marketing plan and is not usually the best time to sell.
- Don't get greedy. If you can lock in a profit, do it. It may not be the highest profit, but it is a profit.
- Remember profit is a return to risk. You cannot reduce all risk and still expect to excel in profit.

SEGA Changes Name To Pa. Association Of Winegrowers

KEMBLESVILLE (Chester Co.) — The members of the Southeast Grape Association of Pennsylvania (SEGA) have voted to change the name of the group to the Pennsylvania Association of Winegrowers (PAW) to better signify its purpose and better represent its widespread membership.

Serving a membership of nearly 70, the association changed its name to reflect its continuing growth of members across Pennsylvania, not merely in the southeast part of the state. This membership expansion has allowed it to become one of the most active organizations addressing wine grape growers' needs in Pennsylvania.

What is now the Pennsylvania Association of Winegrowers was the first organization of its kind in Pennsylvania, welcoming members as early as 1974. Its members now include wine grape growers, wineries, media and academic and industry representatives.

During the early 1970s, Pennsylvania witnessed an increase in wine grape growing that was doubling yearly. Answering this statewide call for a grape growers' organization, a group of 25 growers joined together in 1974 to form the Southeast Grape Industry Association. In its nearly 30-year existence, the group has remained focused on its original objectives: to promote the growing and processing of grapes and grape products; to collect and disseminate information concerning grape growing and processing by publication, news release, and forum; to coordinate the collective purchasing of supplies; to encourage research in viticulture and grape processing; to represent the grape industry in the region; and to encourage the wine-producing industry in the region.

"In the past 30 years, the Pennsylvania wine grape growing and wine industries have continued to strengthen," said Dave Hoffman, president. "Our association has progressed as well. Our membership has grown and expanded and our name change reflects this new focus."

UD Longwood Graduate Program Welcomes Six New Fellows

University of Delaware (UD) graduate students Alisa Ashmon, Dan Camenga, Shelley Dawson, Katie Elzer, John Harrod and Cindy Sobaski recently began a fellowship program leading to a master's degree in public horticulture.

Dr. James E. Swasey, coordinator of the Longwood Graduate Program, said the two-year course includes an internship at Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, Pa., in 2001 and 2002, and a rigorous academic program schedule at UD through spring 2003.

Ashmon of Milwaukee, Ore., received a bachelor's degree in botany and plant pathology from Oregon State University, where she gained experience as a student worker at the Oregon State University Herbarium. After graduation, she worked as a wholesale gardener for Chrysanthemums of Hawaii and completed a student programs internship at Longwood Gardens. Ashmon has special training in drip irrigation, landscape pond systems, plant disease identification and preparing herbarium specimens. She looks forward to garden design as a way of communicating horticulture to the community.

Camenga of Wappingers Falls, N.Y., is a 2001 landscape horticulture graduate of the University of Delaware College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. As an undergraduate, he served a semester-long internship at Walt Disney World's Animal Kingdom and EPCOT parks in Orlando, Fla. He also interned at the historic Herb Garden of Boscobel in Coldspring, N.Y. He is a volunteer gardener for Gibraltar Gardens and has been a horticulture staff member at Accents of Nature, both in Wilmington, Del. Camenga is experienced in plant establishment and maintenance, garden design and animal habitat management. He plans a career that supports his interest in public gardens and public horticulture.

Dawson was graduated from Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, Texas, with a bachelor's degree in horticulture. She also has an associate degree in horticulture from Tarrant County Junior College, Fort Worth. Dawson, Weatherford, Texas, worked as GIS (Geographic Information System) specialist for Cook-Hurlbert, a software company in Austin, Texas and for the World Forestry Center in Portland, Ore. She has experience in maintaining private gardens, GIS data conversion, and posing as Smokey the Bear. Her career aim is to create exhibits demonstrating how plants affect everyday life.

Elzer, a public horticulture graduate of Purdue University, has served internships with The Smithsonian Institution; Marie Selby Botanical Gardens in Sarasota, Fla.; Washington Park Arboretum in Seattle; and the Indianapolis Zoo. In addition, she was a teaching assistant for woody landscape plants and floral design at Purdue. A native of Indianapolis, Elzer has additional experience with horticulture-related writing, special events, and exhibits. She looks forward to supporting horticultural education programs, fundraising, and a career as a botanical garden director.

Harrod of Plano, Texas, received a degree in horticulture, with special emphasis on urban horticulture, from Texas A&M University. He completed internships at the Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center in Austin, Mercer Arboretum and Botanical Gardens in Houston, and Dallas Arboretum. In addition, Harrod has been a greenhouse manager, a public gardens technician and nursery sales contractor, and is interested in native plants and land stewardship. He aspires to a career as director of a public horticulture institution.

Sobaski was graduated from Iowa State University with a degree in horticulture, public garden emphasis. A native of Packwood, Iowa, Sobaski has been an education intern at Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain, Ga., and a horticulture intern at The Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis. An interest in working with children led to her design and installation of a sensory garden for children at Callaway Gardens. In addition, she has taught plant-related programs in elementary schools and was youth education coordinator at Reiman Gardens, Ames, Iowa. She anticipates a career as director of education at a public garden.

According to Swasey, the fellows will participate in two educational projects over the two years. Along with the second-year fellows, they will work on "Developing a Vision for a Model Organization to Serve Public Horticulture in the United States," a project to develop and refine the leadership, interpersonal and communication skills of the students.

A second project, involving only the first-year fellows, will be to create an index for "The Chimes," a bimonthly in-house publication of Longwood Gardens. Students will research and choose appropriate software to index the collection of more than 200 issues, create a sample index and tutorial on how to use the index, and maintain the index over the course of their fellowship.

Finally, each fellow will work on an individual, independent research project and write a thesis.

Vegetable Entomologist Joins NYS Agricultural Experiment Station

Brian A. Nault has joined Cornell University as assistant professor of entomology at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y.

An applied ecologist as well as an entomologist, Nault will be working to understand insect pest life systems within vegetable cropping systems in order to determine how pests can best be managed. He started work on April 2, 2001.

"We are extremely pleased to have Brian join our faculty as a member of the Cornell vegetable team, and also to generate research in landscape ecology that will benefit other programs in the department," said Wendell Roelofs. "He comes with excellent Ph.D training from North Carolina State under Dr. George Kennedy — who spent time at Geneva, himself — and also with nearly four years of experience in vegetable research and extension on the faculty at Virginia Polytechnic Institute."

Nault's last position was as assistant professor at the Eastern Shore Agricultural Research and Extension Center, Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University, in Painter, Va. At Geneva, he succeeds Charles Eckenrode, professor emeritus of entomology, who retired in 1999.

Nault believes his newest challenge will be balancing his short- and long-term research so they complement each other. "In the short term, part of my responsibility is to provide growers with immediate solutions to managing pests," he said. "This includes such things as pesticide recommendations and economic thresholds.'

Over the long term, Nault seeks to develop landscape ecology studies to further the understanding of the ecology of arthropod pests and their natural enemies for use in developing practical, economically and environmentally sound pest management programs for the agricultural community.

Apple Breeder Susan K. Brown Promoted To Full Professor At Cornell

Susan K. Brown, associate professor of horticulture at Cornell University in the horticultural sciences department at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y., for 16 years, has been promoted to professor.

"It is great to see Dr. Brown's accomplishments recognized by her academic peers. She has continued the Station tradition of developing new varieties of apples based on sound science. This work is more important than ever as the apple industry faces global competition," said Station Director James E. Hunter.

"Dr. Brown maintains her focus on developing high quality apple varieties that will, first and foremost, enhance the profitability of the New York apple industry," said horticultural sciences department chair Hugh Price. "Her understanding of apple genetics has facilitated the incorporation of many high quality traits into her advanced selections."

Brown develops superior apple varieties in a breeding program that utilizes both traditional breeding techniques and biotechnology. The program emphasizes fruit quality such as firmness, crispness and flavor, genetic resistance to diseases, and genetic control of plant forms.

Among diseases, she stresses resistance to apple scab, powdery mildew and fire blight. Using molecular markers she is learning how to genetically control plant architecture. Brown is also researching antioxidants and ascorbic acid in breeding lines to improve the health benefits of apples, working with Cy Lee in the department of food science and technology at Geneva.

Seeing the genetic improvements in attributes develop from crosses that she has made is very rewarding to Brown. "There is so much genetic variation in apple, for many different traits, that you really can use that genetic variation effectively to make improvements that might not have been thought possible," she said.

Brown said collaboration with other departments, visiting scientists, graduate students, and technicians, is one of the strengths of her program. At Geneva, she has worked on genome mapping and gene tagging with Norman Weeden and Minou Hemmat in horticulture; cooperated with Herb Aldwinkle and Jay Norelli, in plant pathology, on transgenics and the development of disease-resistant advanced selections; and collaborated with Harvey Reissig, in entomology, on resistance to apple maggot.

Still Named First Louise Roselle Fellow In Public Horticulture

Shannon Still, a Longwood Graduate Fellow at the University of Delaware, was named the first recipient of the Louise Roselle Fellowship in Public Horticulture.

Established by trustees of the Unidel Foundation to honor Louise Roselle, wife of the university president David Roselle, the fellowship will be granted each spring, if eligible candidates exist, to a rising second-year fellow with high academic standing, an excellent research program, and demonstrated leadership potential. The latter quality involves being both a strong team member as well as promoting team building within the group.

"The new fellowship came as a complete and pleasant surprise," said Dr. James E. Swasey, director of the Longwood Fellows Program. "It is a prestigious addition to an already outstanding program, a recognition that really enhances our program, coming as it does with it a stipend for the individual as well as for the individual's research."

According to Swasey, the named fellowship is to honor Louise Roselle's active interest in landscape design and renovation on campus and her personal interest in gardening and horticulture.

"Shannon is an outstanding example of the kind of fellows we seek for our program in public garden leadership. Many candidates apply; only five or six are chosen each year. So, Shannon's competition for this award among our fine student pool was stiff," Swasey said.

Still earned a bachelor's degree in agriculture with a major in horticulture in 1997 from The Ohio State University (OSU), where he specialized in floriculture and minored in agriculture business. His father, a professor of horticulture at OSU, established and still runs a nonprofit organization dedicated to perennials — the Perennial Plant Association.

"Although I've been around horticulture my whole life, my father never pressured me into the field. I gladly chose the same route," said Still. "I am, however, blazing my own trail to the side of his. I have met so many wonderful people in horticulture. That's when I decided I would like to be one of those friendly people who has fun, works hard, and gets paid for doing what they love."

Still first became interested in the Longwood Graduate Program when, as a greenhouse production intern at Longwood in 1998, he was encouraged to apply by the Longwood staff. From December 1998 until June 2000, Still worked as the herb department manager at Millcreek Gardens, LLC, a wholesale perennial and herb nursery in central Ohio. He often gave talks at Ohio garden centers on new and underused perennials, herb culture and care, and herb usage.

Still's thesis research for his master's degree involves the growth and flowering of the blue poppy Mecocnopsis at different temperatures.

"I wanted a physical science research project, one that would ideally benefit Longwood, which wants to grow this plant for their conservatory display," Still said. "The blue poppy cannot withstand the hot summers of this region, so that is a need to determine a production cycle in which to grow the plants inside for display."

After he is graduated from the Longwood Fellows Program, Still plans to earn a doctorate, and then teach horticulture at the university level.

Then consider becoming a Farmers' Market vendor. If you're already a Farmers' Market vendor, could you use tips to increase your sales? If you're the Market Master, ever wonder what procedures or promotions are working well at other markets?

Find out the answers to these questions and more at the "Building Better Farmers' Market" seminar, Thursday, Dec. 13, at the Howard County Fairgrounds.

Organized by Maryland's County Agricultural Economic Development Specialists, this daylong seminar will feature information on pricing and promotions, high-value market extenders, market organization, mentoring new vendors, niche marketing, safe food handling procedures, and product selection.

Keynote speaker is Ann Yonkers, manager of the popular Dupont Circle Farmers' Market in Washington, D.C., and a staff member with the American Farmland Trust. Yonkers will share her expertise and experience on "Building Better Farmers' Markets."

Other speakers include Becky Gurley, producer, Calverts' Gift Farm; Pam King, Caragh Fitzgerald, and Bryan Butler, all extension educators, Maryland Cooperative Extension; and Tony Evans, farmers' market coordinator, Maryland Department of Agriculture. A panel discussion will feature Market Masters from some of Maryland's most successful farmers' markets.

Plan to come early and visit the numerous commercial exhibits from agribusinesses and agencies that support local agriculture.

For more information, contact Howard County Economic Development Authority, Ginger S. Myers, 6751 Columbia Gateway Drive, Suite 500, Columbia, MD 21046, (410) 313-6500.

IPM Personalities: Shelby Fleischer

When extension agents from around the state work on insect problems in vegetable and mushroom crops, they turn to Penn State Associate Professor of Entomology Shelby Fleischer.

Fleischer started his academic career in biology, receiving his bachelor's degree at St. Marys College of Maryland. He continued his education in entomology at Virginia Tech, where he received a master's degree, and received his doctorate at Auburn University.

Fleischer then did four years of post doctoral work in a Gypsy Moth Geographic Information Systems (GIS) program at Virginia Tech. He looked to agriculture to combine his biology and entomology background with field work at Penn State in 1991, and has been at the university ever since.

Fleischer spends the majority of his time studying the structure, dynamics, and management of insect populations. "I look primarily at fluctuations in space and time," said Fleischer. "In the past, people only looked at the density of the insects present, but in resent years there has been a shift toward looking at spatial patterns over a period of time."

Fleischer has developed sampling plans that have been widely adopted for IPM in alfalfa, and an area-wide project in hardwood forests and leafy greens in the Caribbean.

His recent work, studying spatial structure with respect to insect density maps, he calls "precision IPM." His students have mapped insect density in alfalfa, potatoes, tomatoes, vineyards, and within protected structures."

"Spatial structure captured with GPS-supported sampling are being related to changes in insect density, population phenology, and management strategy. We have found using maps to target pesticides results in reducing the use of pesticides by up to 40 percent and a reduction in insecticide resistance," said Fleischer.

Fleischer's extension assignment involves a monitoring program and mapping insects for vegetables and mushrooms. "We're developing IPM programs in these crops based on an improved understanding of biological and ecological processes," Fleischer said. Priority is placed on developing economically feasible technologies that improve farmworker and environmental safety.

"Farm-worker safety is our highest priority" said Fleischer. "Most of the time, other priorities, such as environmental and consumer safety are met or improved as long as the person directly dealing with pest management on the farm is safe."

Fleischer also spends time presenting talks to growers at county meetings and providing in-service education courses and planning meetings for extension agents. He has co-authorships of several crop profiles for the Environmental Protection Agency, written for commercial production guides and a monthly newsletter, provided training workshops for growers, and provided support for a project dealing with cucurbits, mushrooms and sweet corn.

Fleischer also works on several Websites, including a regional multistate GIS approach to pheromone and blacklight trapping of pests of sweet corn that can be found at http://www.ento.psu.edu/vegetable/sweetcorn/. A Webpage for vegetable pest management can be found at http://www.ento.psu.edu/vegetable/. He can be reached by e-mail at sjf4@psu.edu.

Commercial Floriculture Production To Be Measured

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania ranked seventh nationally in wholesale sales of floriculture crops in 2000 with a wholesale value of sales by commercial flower and foliage producers that totaled $160.9 million, which was up $2.4 million from 1999.

In 2000, Pennsylvania's wholesale value of cut flowers sold totaled $4.4 million and sales of bedding and garden plants in flats, pots and baskets totaled $82.7 million. The wholesale value of sales for unfinished plants and propagation materials totaled $6.99 million. The total covered growing area for Pennsylvania in 2000 was 22.9 million square feet.

The Commercial Floriculture Production Survey will be used to produce reliable, accurate data on key items such as area of production, number sold, value of sales, and production. Complete and timely reporting by growers will ensure that reliable, objective data on current commercial floriculture production are available to the public and the industry. Accurate industry statistics are crucial to obtaining research funding and government support on various issues.

In late December, approximately 925 Pennsylvania floriculture operations will receive questionnaires for this survey and in January, non respondents will be contacted by an interviewer for either a telephone or personal interview.

Individual operation information is completely confidential by law. Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service safeguards the confidentiality of all survey responses and publishes State and U.S. data only, ensuring that no individual operation or grower will be identified.

Results from the Commercial Floricultural Production Survey will be released on April 25, 2002, in the 2002 Floricultural Crop Summary report. It will also be available on the Internet at http://www.usda.gov/nass/.

Integrated Pest Management Program To Lead Vegetable Project

GENEVA, N.Y. — The New York State Integrated Pest Management (IPM) program has received a three-year grant for $518,333 to develop reduced risk pest management strategies for cucurbits.

The grant, which is funded by the USDA's Risk Avoidance and Mitigation Program (RAMP), is a three-state cooperative project among New York, Ohio and Massachusetts, and is coordinated by Curt Petzoldt, assistant director of the IPM program.

"The goal of the project is to educate farmers, extension specialists, extension agents, and agribusiness people about the need to adopt sustainable integrated pest and crop management (IPM/ICM) techniques that focus on cucumbers, melons, pumpkins and squash," said Petzoldt. "The end result will be higher adoption of IPM/ICM production techniques by cucurbit growers in New York, Massachusetts, and Ohio that will translate into an improved economic bottom line for farmers and enhanced environmental quality for the citizens of those states."

The purpose of RAMP is to fund research education and extension projects of up to five years to develop reduced risk pest management strategies for agro-ecosystems or cropping systems. It is specifically geared to situations where current pest management practices make use of pesticides whose labels are threatened under the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA).

Other major participants in the grant are John Mishanec, Eastern N.Y. vegetable IPM specialist; Joe Kovach, Ohio State IPM coordinator; and Ruth Hazzard, U-Mass vegetable IPM/extension specialist.

Kovach mentioned how fruitful his cooperation with Petzoldt has been, "Every proposal I write with Curt gets funded," he said. "It shows the national respect that Curt and the New York State IPM Program have. Cooperating with them on this project will certainly help the growers in Ohio move further along the IPM continuum."

The researchers will demonstrate and evaluate crop and pest management systems for cucurbits on growers' farms, as well as more controlled evaluations at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in Geneva, N.Y. On organic, IPM, and conventional plots, they will compare economic profitability, environmental impact, and pest control efficacy. The researchers will also examine biological, chemical and physical soil characteristics for long-term differences among the systems. Over the past seven years, researchers in Geneva have performed similar studies with strawberries, cabbage, and corn.
